The Late Speaker
Morrow for Vice-President
Bad News, and Good
If You Were Dying

By Arthur Brisbane

THE DEATH of Speaker Longworth will be deeply regretted in Washington and throughout the country. He was able, witty, good natured, tactful. His colleagues liked him, the nation respected him for his ability and character.

The country feels deep sympathy for his widow, daughter of President Theodore Roosevelt.

Republicans continue discussing Vice-Presidential candidates for 1932 in place of Mr. Curtis. They want someone from the East, and Dwight W. Morrow is suggested.

President Hoover, whose renomination is certain, comes from California. Morrow from New Jersey.

One thing you may predict. Mr. Morrow would not be submerged, lost or forgotten in the Vice-Presidential office. He would see to that personally. And he might easily and gently glide from the Senate to the White House in 1936.

The bad news from Europe deals with probable revolution in Portugal.

Cheerful news tells of better feeling between Italy and France. President Doumergue calls Italy "a noble and friendly nation" and recalls Italy "fighting gloriously and valorously at the side of France."

France, said President Doumergue, had suffered enough from war to appreciate the value of peace. "But she has also acquired too much experience through her own history to ignore the fact that there is no durable peace without security of frontiers."

For us, there is no durable peace without security, based on dominating force in the air.

The sooner we realize that the safer we shall be.

France stands first in air power, Italy second, Uncle Sam third.

A great German military authority, Gen. Berthold von Deimling, declares that Germany no longer needs a great army, because flying machines, explosives and poison gas will alone be important in the next war. In the next war, says he, the fighters will attack entire populations with poison gas, "against attack from the air there can be no real defense and no protection—at least for the masses of the population."

The general assures you that "upon the completion of the first mobilization the warring powers will overwhelm one another with their air fleets."

Somebody ought to tell all that to our army and navy which still look upon airships as a not too important "auxiliary." They remind you of the English king who said powder and bullets would never amount to much, and offered special prizes to yeomen growing trees suitable for making bows and arrows, upon which, said he, "England must always rely."

What is your answer to this question raised by the Philadelphia "Etude"?

"If you had only 24 hours to live, and could hear just one piece of music, which would you select?"

The Rev. Henry van Dyke wants a regular concert, Beethoven's "Heroica," also "Lead Kindly Light," "Abide With Me" and Handel's "Largo."

Some of us in our last 24 hours would say, "No music, thanks, this is a time for thinking, not for tunes."

Cyrus H. K. Curtis would like to hear at the last moment, "Softly, Now the Light of Day."

Many not so high brow would like to hear the old song, "Long, Long Ago." For when age, disease and death approach, not the present hour, but earlier, happier days seem worthwhile.

The Medical Times, read by 14,000 doctors, attacks birth control on economic grounds, criticising clergymen, including British bishops, that approve birth control propaganda.

The Medical Times is worried about "standardized mothers" and fears that woman will be "thwarted in the fulfillment of her destiny."

However, educated women, unless controlled by religious conviction, will continue to regulate the size of families, as they always have done. The important question is "can you properly keep from poor and ignorant women, unable to care for their families properly, the knowledge given freely to more prosperous mothers, that might support more children?"

HARVARD FLIER KILLED

James M. Burns, Harvard sophomore, was killed late this afternoon when his Harvard Flying Club plane crashed in a field off Union st., Hingham. Burns' home was in Evanston, Ill. His family had a summer place at Cotuit. His college address was 9 Bow st., Cambridge. He took off from the Boston airport alone in a Curtiss-Robin three-passenger monoplane. Over Hingham his engine skipped. He attempted to land in the field of Thomas F. McSweeney, but crashed. Burns was going to New York tonight to see his parents off on a trip to Bermuda. It was the first fatal accident of the Harvard Flying Club. The nose of the plane buried itself in the ground, but the wreckage did not catch fire. Burns was dead when removed.

LEHAN DIES; RUSSELL IN TRIBUTE

PNEUMONIA IS FATAL TO LEHAN

City Treasurer of Cambridge Dies After a Hard Fight; Family at Bedside

Henry F. Lehan, City Treasurer of Cambridge, died at the Cardinal O'Connell House, St. Elisabeth's Hospital, at 6:35 a. m., today, a victim of pneumonia.

Hearing of the death, Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge, whose efforts to oust Mr. Lehan as treasurer had met with defeat, paid tribute to him as "a game fighter with words never admit defeat, a memory I shall cherish always."

A special meeting of the Cambridge City Council was called for tonight by Jeremiah J. O'Connor, president, to hear appropriations on his death and arrange for attendance at the funeral.

FUNERAL MONDAY.

The services will be held Monday at 10 a. m. with a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Mary's Church, Norfolk st., Cambridge. Interment will follow at Cambridge Cemetery, Coolidge ave., Cambridge.

The end came quietly, after a seven-day struggle, in which the veteran member of the Cambridge city government fought bravely.

Members of his family had been hastily summoned to his bedside when it became known that death was near. Dr. Henry S. Rowen and Dr. Felix Magirr, attending physicians, were also present when death came.

Dr. Magirr was summoned into the case yesterday by Dr. Rowen. He is a specialist in pulmonary diseases.

RUSSELL'S TRIBUTE

Mayor Russell considered the death of the treasurer a personal loss, explaining in his statement on the death that he had hoped for the day when their political hostilities would cease.

"In the death of Henry F. Lehan his host of friends have lost a stanch ally, his opponents their dearest enemy and the community a picturesque and dominating personality. He will be missed by all of us," said the mayor.

"For more than a quarter of a century he has been an important factor in every political campaign. He was a leader of extra

MYSTERY TIP MAY LEAD TO KILLERS

Acting on a mysterious "tip," Inspector Daniel M. O'Connell left Somerville police headquarters today to run down what Police Chief Thomas Damery called "a very important clue" to the slayers of James M. Riley.

Police of all Greater Boston cities and towns were co-operating to the search for the killers, four in number, who last night shot Riley down at a filling station on the Northern Artery, Somerville.

HINT CENTERS IN BOSTON

An autopsy today disclosed that Riley was shot by an expert marksman, the single bullet that was fired traversing his heart.

The four youths are believed to be hiding in Boston or the suburbs. Their automobile, a black sedan with red wheels, may lead to their capture, the authorities believe.

"We are working on an out of town lead that looks pretty good at the present time," said Chief

GALLO MUST GO TO DEATH CHAIR

Samuel Gallo must die in the electric chair for the murder of Joseph Fantasia, unless the Governor intervenes, as a result of a decision made today by the full bench of the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court ruled that there was no error in Gallo's trial, and ordered judgment on the jury's verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

Gallo has not yet been sentenced but the mandatory penalty for the crime is electrocution.

Fantasia was shot to death on Prince st., North End, on June 11, 1927, and the subsequent trials of Gallo and Gangi Cero for the murder were unique in the state's legal history.

Cero was first tried and convicted, but was saved within a few hours of the time set for his execution, because Philomena Romano, star witness, changed her story.

Gallo was then indicted for the murder and convicted. As both men had been convicted as principals, a new trial for each was ordered and they were tried together, which later gave rise to an appeal in Gallo's behalf, which the court today rejected. Gallo was convicted and Cero found not guilty.

'SOLUTION' OF NURSE MURDER IN NOTE

Received by District Attorney Crossley as Officials Row Over Second Autopsy

Providence, April 10—Dist. Atty. Crossley of Fall River arrived today with a letter which will solve the murder of Verna Russell, if the writer tells the truth, he declared. The letter reached him in Fall River just before he left to confer with Atty. Gen. McLyman, here. It contains sufficient data to solve the crime, Crossley said.

He indicated that it placed the murder in Massachusetts. It was not signed.

Highlights of the case were as follows:

1—Rhode Island refused Massachusetts permission to exhume the body and performance an autopsy unless it could be proved the nurse was strangled in Massachusetts.

2—Dist. Atty. Crossley and Dr. George B. Magrath went to Providence for a "council of war" with Atty.-Gen. McLyman relative to an examination of the murdered girl's organs by Dr. Magrath.

3—Investigation of the attempted resuscitation theory disclosed that Rhode Island officials had barred Dist. Atty. Crossley at the first autopsy.

4—Atty.-Gen. McLyman announced he visited last night the Tiverton, R. I., lane where the body was found and decided Miss Russell was slain at 10 p. m., March 23, an an automobile at the spot.

5—Dr. Magrath, noted criminologist, announced an opinion exactly opposite—to the effect that the murder did not occur in the vicinity.

A constantly widening breach between the state officials threatened a long delay before Hathaway, son of Rep. Louis E. Hathaway of Fall River, is placed on trial in either state.

TO STUDY REPORT

Until Massachusetts can present positive proof of jurisdiction or proof that something vital is lacking in the Rhode Island pathological reports, Atty.-Gen. McLyman said he would refuse permission for Dr. Magrath to have the body exhumed in Portsmouth, R. I., and perform a second autopsy.

Dist. Atty. Crossley and Dr. Magrath went to Providence from Fall River this afternoon. They will study the autopsy report made by Dr. Charles Bryant, Tiverton medical examiner, and the report of analysis of organs made by Dr. Lester Rounds, Rhode Island health commissioner, and seek the right to examine all other records in the case.

If Attorney-General McLyman persisted in his refusal to allow exhumation, the Massachusetts authorities were to seek permission

EIGHT CASES OF LIQUOR TAKEN FROM CARGO

Machine Guns Bring a Speed Boat Without Lights to a Halt Off Nantucket

Five men on a scuttled speed boat were captured under machine gun fire in Nantucket Sound, it was revealed today when Coast Guard patrol boat S-13 brought captives and alleged liquor to the Woods Hole Coast Guard base.

The capture followed a mile chase during which two rounds, 76 shots, were sent by the pursuing guardsmen, disabling the fleeing craft. The scuttling followed.

The five were on the speed boat Hit-Her, a twin-screwed speed boat that was a sister ship of her captor, the former rum runner TRADD.

More than 800 cases of Four Aces whiskey and a quantity of other liquors valued at $25,000 were aboard the craft, coast guardsmen reported.

The captured men gave their names as Charles H. Martin of Plain st., Providence, Fred H. Johnson of Washington st., Lyan, Albert Butters of Main st., Worcester, and Harry Williams of West 9th st., New York city.

To Deputy Collector of Customs Thomas F. Finnegan at Boston, however, they gave the names Harry Slocum and Charles Mead, both of South Dartmouth, Harry Manley of New Bedford, Albert Dahin of Springfield and Robert Taylor of New York.

They were fingerprinted and photographed for the federal authorities at police headquarters.

They were taken to Boston on another patrol boat together with eight cases of liquor guardsmen said they seized before the Hit-Her sank.

Boatswain's Mate Cecil McLeod, skipper of the S-13, reported to Base Commander R. S. Patch that the Hit-Her was sighted last night off Cape Pogo, in Nantucket Sound.

Running without lights, the speed boat failed to stop at the flare and siren warning, the report said, and two rounds of machine gun fire sailed a halt in her flight.

He said that six-inch "scuttle valves" were opened on the Hit-Her as the patrol boat drew along side. The five were taken aboard at gunpoint and guardsmen landed the sight cases before he ordered them from the sinking craft.

The men were held on technical charges until they could be questioned by Boston customs officials.

2 GET 12 YEARS FOR HOLDUPS

William Patterson, 24, who has been in this country less than a year from England, will be here much longer, for today in Superior Court, with Arthur J. Ryan, also 24, he was sentenced to 12 to 20 years in State Prison.

Patterson and Ryan pleaded guilty to seven chain store holdups in the South End, Back Bay and Roxbury.

When sentence was imposed, Katherine Ryan, sister of Arthur, became hysterical and fainted. Court officers carried her out of the courtroom.

The holdup pair were captured in their rooms on Warren ave, March 26 after a chain store in Appleton st., South End, had been held up and robbed.

Employes of 16 stores viewed the men at police headquarters, and seven identified them as the pair who had held them up.

New Mosquito War Planned by State

After rounding up suspects and subjecting them to fingerprints or some kind of tests, State authorities claim to have discovered that the really bothersome mosquitoes buzzing around and biting deeply in the north of Boston suburbs, came from the Saugus, Revere and Lynn marshes.

Accordingly the legislative committee on agriculture today reported a bill providing for the State to drain the marshes to eradicate this far-flying salt water species as well as four other kinds in the same area. The appropriation called for is 15 cents on each $1000 of taxable property in the three communities.

68 Indicted, Including 2 in Bank Robbery

The Norfolk county grand jury today returned the first indictments during the spring season. Among 68 true bills were indictments against Frederick S. McDonald and John J. Porter on charges growing out of the robbery of the Milton State Bank a month ago. They were held in $25,000 each.

Thomas F. Grassie, facing eight counts of breaking and entering in the Cohasset summer colony, pleaded guilty on seven counts. Among the places he confessed entering was St. Stephen's Church in Attentice ave. The poor box was robbed of $100.

high government officials will attend.

Citizens of the city followed the hearse to the railway station and Mrs. Longworth and other members of the family passed through the streets almost unnoticed and boarded the train.

Local pall bearers, flower cars and a delegation of Aiken citizens followed the hearse.

Messages of condolences from sympathetic persons in all walks of life and beautiful blankets of flowers continued to arrive today. Col. Archibald Roosevelt, brother of Mrs. Longworth, and Kermit Roosevelt, another brother, had charge of completing local arrangements today with Col. Campbell Hodges, aide to President Hoover.

Col. Roosevelt said the active pallbearers would be himself and Kermit, Buckner A. Wallingford of Cincinnati, a brother-in-law of Mr. Longworth, and Mr. Wallingford's three sons, Landen, Nicholas and R. A., Jr.

HONORARY PALLBEARERS

Honorary pallbearers for the funeral will include former Speaker Frederick H. Gillett, R. L. Agassiz, Quincy A. Shaw, Wallace Goodrich, Thomas Nelson Perkins, Frederick Winthrop and S. V. R. Crosby, all of Boston.

Home City Mourns Passing of Longworth

Cincinnati, O., April 10 (10)—Grief-stricken and sorrowing, the city that knew Nicholas Longworth as a child and delighted in his accomplishments, prepared today to receive its beloved "Nick" in death. The entire city was in mourning except for a little girl at the famous Rockwood home of the Longworths. There was none who would tell six-year-old Paulina, pride of the late Speaker's heart, of her father's death. The task was left to "Princess" Alice Longworth when she arrives with her husband's body.

MAYOR ASSURES AIR MANEUVERS

Acting on a resolution of Crosscup-Pishon Post, A. L. Mayor Curley today endorsed the original program of army maneuvers in the air scheduled here next month.

The resolution and the mayor's endorsement followed a decision of the War Department to curtail some of the programs due to protests against noise.

"The action taken by the Crosscup-Pishon Post is an indication of the manner in which the men who served during the war regard the program as originally outlined by the War Department," Mayor Curley wrote.

"Personally I have received no protests, and you may rest assured that such as have been received have emanated from pacifists and internationalists who are now interested in none other country than they are in some others.

Press accounts had indicated that the Boston program would be restricted to an altitude flight, while other sections of the country would see real maneuvers.

2 Held in Robbery From Curley Aide

Charged with breaking and entering the home of William L. Anderson, assistant secretary to Mayor Curley, at 69 Arborway, Jamaica Plain, two men held for the grand jury in West Roxbury court today.

The defendants, Daniel Sullivan of New York and Paul McGrane of Providence, waived examination and were held in $5000 each. The house was entered Wednesday night, and jewelry was alleged to have been stolen.

"This is not the time for personal reminiscence, but my thoughts today are necessarily of him and his career.

REFUSED TO RESIGN

"In a conversation I had with him shortly after my election, I asked him to resign his office and I received a prompt reply that he not only would not resign, but that he would hold it. That he did successfully to the end. Anticipating my every move, he beat me in every skirmish and at every turning of the way. He won my respect in that process, for he knew, and never denied, that my efforts to remove him were prompted solely by a sense of obligation to the public and never by anything personal.

"The loss to me personally is great. I always looked forward to the day when hostilities between us would cease (for even the Hundred Years War had its ending) to the time when he and I would sit down together, compare notes and talk and laugh as friends over the events of the past year.

FIGHTING SPIRIT

"That possibility is now gone forever and I shall cherish always the memory of the game fighter who would never admit defeat. The spirit of the man is well exemplified in his deathbed statement to his lifelong friend, Daniel H. Coakley, in these words:

"'Dan, I'm sick, but I know I'm going to beat this and get better.'

"May that fighting spirit of Henry F. Lehan now rest in peace."

Lehan was taken to the hospital last Monday, after his illness, which started on Friday of last week, became serious. As the week went on his condition grew worse, although the veteran official fought strongly.

On Wednesday the steady lowering of his condition brought a summons to members of his family, who rushed to his bedside. Later in the day a priest was placed under an oxygen tent.

The last rites of the church were also administered. For a time yesterday, Lehan showed a little improvement, and it was hoped he would win his fight. Last night, however, his condition grew gradually worse.

FRIENDS AT SIDE

Lehan fought until the end, and it was only a few minutes before death that he lapsed into unconsciousness. Members of his immediate family, relatives and his closest friends grouped about the bedside as he slipped into the shadows.

They included his widow, his brother, Charles, several nephews and nieces and cousins and the intimate associates, Daniel F. Coakley, Councilor Patrick J. Deiney, Atty. John W. Lyons and Daniel F. O'Brien.

The death of Henry F. Lehan closed a colorful political career of 33 years in Cambridge.

Born 57 years ago in the East Cambridge section, he received his early education in the public schools there.

At the age of 24 he entered his first political contest and won a seat in the old Cambridge common council.

He served seven years and then was elected to the State Legislature from the same district, serving two terms.

FIRST MET COAKLEY

It was then that he met Daniel H. Coakley of Brighton, a fellow-representative, and the two became lifelong friends.

His first appointment as city treasurer was given him by the Cambridge City Council of 1914. Timothy W. Good, father of Judge Francis Good of the Boston municipal court, was then mayor.

In 1925, the first storm broke over his office in connection with the loss of city funds through the failure of the Tremont Trust Co.

Lehan was brought into Middlesex court charged with criminal negligence and corrupt abuse of power in the handling of city money.

FREED BY READING

The motions of the district attorney for "leave to proceed" were dismissed by Judge Sisk, and Lehan was freed on a nol pros by the then district attorney, Arthur K. Reading.

Having built up a strong friendship in the city, Lehan successfully combatted efforts to oust him from the treasurer's office.

No further attempts were made in the administration of Mayor Quinn. But the latter retained him as a "holdover in office" through failure to appoint any other person.

When Mayor Richard M. Russell took office two years ago, a fight was begun to oust the treasurer. Seven names submitted to the council were rejected one after another, leaving Lehan in office under the "holdover" status.

Lehan seldom appeared to plead his own cause but his wishes were always carried out by his friends.

GAVE UP ATHLETICS

During his Harvard days, Robert Gould Shaw was interested in baseball, but gave up this form of athletics after graduation to enter business for a brief period, with the firm of Horatio Harris & Co., 18 India st.

Business, however, did not appeal to him, and he men abroad to further his studies, at Heidelberg and Stuttgart, and then took up architecture at the Royal Polytechnic School.

On his return to this country in 1874 he practiced as an architect for three years, then gave this up to become trustee of several estates.

CURATOR AT WIDENER

Meanwhile he had become interested in stage literature and had begun a collection, which resulted, in 1915, in his being made curator of the theater collection at Widener.

He was married on Sept. 14, 1875, to Isabella Pratt Hunnewell of Wellesley and they had five children, Mrs. Susan Welles Lee of Wellesley, Robert Gould Shaw, Jr., Harvard '00, of Brookline; Hollis Hunnewell Shaw, Harvard '99, also of Brookline; Theodore Lyman Shaw, Harvard '05, of Wellesley, and Arthur Hunnewell Shaw, Harvard '07, of Wellesley.

PONZI IS SUED FOR $20,000

Charles Ponzi, whose financial bubble burst with loss of millions to Massachusetts investors, and who is in State prison, was sued for $20,000 today by Benildi Maiguti, a Boston woman.

By her suit, filed in Suffolk Superior court, she seeks to recover on a $10,00 note which she alleges Ponzi gave her on Sept. 1, 1925.

Warden James L. Hogsett of State prison served the papers on Ponzi, who is nearing the end of his term. He was sentenced to seven to nine years as a common and notorious thief and upon his release faces deportation proceedings.

Boston Artist Weds Philadelphia Girl

Philadelphia, April 10 (AP)—Mrs. Eleanor J. Franklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Joyce Sewell, Jr., and Frederick T. Le Boutiller, an artist of Boston, were married today at the home of the bride's parents here.

Back Bay Woman Swallows Poison

Mrs. Viola Mollis, 32, of Boylston st., Back Bay, attempted suicide in her apartment by swallowing several poison tablets. She is in a serious condition at the City Hospital.

The woman was found on the floor of her apartment by Robert Cpeck, a taxi driver who had received a telephone call to pick up a fare at her home. She is alleged by Speck to have been moaning that she wanted to end her life.

Doak Gets Gold Card

Washington, April 10 (AP)—Secretary Doak has become a member of the National Federation of federal employes. His union card is of gold.

G. O. P. MAY LOSE LONGWORTH'S OHIO SEAT

Widow Is Suggested as His Successor, but Friends Say She Will Not Run

Washington, April 10 (INS)—The tangled political situation affecting the 72nd Congress is still more uncertain today because of the passing of "Nick" Longworth.

Not only must the Republicans retain the Longworth seat from the First Ohio District to be able to organize, but they also are confronted with what promises to be a first-class family row over who is to succeed him as candidate for Speaker. Either situation is serious enough, from the party standpoint; taken together, they form a predicament of monumental proportions.

G. O. P. IN DOUBT

Concerning the Longworth vacancy there is real doubt felt here over the ability of the Republicans to fill it. "Nick" barely squeezed through in his district last election by some 3500 votes over John W. Pattison, a wet Democrat. Only the Speaks' long service and his great personal popularity and his eminence as Speaker pulled him through. Probably no other Republican could have done it.

If the special election which Gov. George White of Ohio calls this autumn elects a Democrat from the Longworth district—and the Republicans are in fearful of it—it means that the House lineup will be 217 Republicans, 217 Democrats and the lone Farmer-Laborite.

Which of the two parties would be able to organize and elect a Speaker in that event is a question. Nobody in Washington pretends to know. There are discontents in both parties capable of bolting and voting with the opposition.

MRS. LONGWORTH SUGGESTED

The immediate task ahead of the Republicans is to find a candidate of sufficient stature in Cincinnati to hold the first district. If the political temper of the district is the same as it was last November the task is no easy one.

Rep. Schafer (R.) of Wisconsin, came out openly today with the suggestion that Mrs. Longworth stand for her late husband's seat, in conformity with a practice that has grown up in recent years of the widows of members "carrying on."

Hoover Train to Leave for Funeral Tonight

Washington, April 10 (AP)—Two trains carrying government officials will leave the capital tonight for Cincinnati to attend the funeral of the late Speaker Longworth.

The first will leave early in the evening and will carry the Senate and House delegations, with all members of Congress.

President Hoover's train will leave later carrying the Chief Executive and probably a number of cabinet officers and other administrative officials.

The presidential train will arrive at the Cooley station, Cincinnati, shortly before noon, where it will be met by Mayor Wilson and the nine-city officials, who will escort the President and Mrs. Hoover to the Longworth home, "Rockwood."

80-Volume Scrapbook Left by Longworth

It was a super scrapbook of newspaper clippings covering 10 years of his personal and political career, from his beginning as a member of the Cincinnati school board to the close of six years as speaker.

Miss Mildred E. Reeves, who has had the keeping of the scrap book in charge for 18 years, estimated that there are 80 large volumes of the pasted clippings. Most of them are stored in his Cincinnati home.

"The stories on his death and funeral will close the series."

Sister of Longworth to Sail for America

Paris, April 10 (AP)—The Countess Clara Longworth de Chambrun, sister of Nicholas Longworth, cabled friends in Paris today that she was leaving Tunis by plane and would take the Ile de France at Cherbourg next Wednesday for the United States.

South End Man Is Held as Burglar

Antonio Rockford, 22, of Acton st., South End, was held in $500 for the grand jury today in municipal court, after two pawnbrokers had identified him as the man who pawned watches and chains.

Rockford was charged with entering the home of Anthony Banner, 43 Union pk., South End, last night, and stealing two watches, two chains and $2300 worth of postal savings certificates.

Chicago, April 10 (INS)—A new grade of gasoline, selling for nine cents a gallon, will be placed on the market in the principal cities of 10 Western states, according to an announcement today by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

In addition, prices on the company's present grades will be reduced one cent a gallon commencing tomorrow.

Tucson Host to John D., Jr., Without Knowing It

Tucson, Ariz., April 10—According to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., it's a blessing to be a stranger sometimes. This he revealed yesterday just before leaving here for New York City.

Rockefeller came here after his doctor had advised him to take a rest. He intended staying only two weeks but when he found that his identity was not known, and that it was possible for him to get a real rest, he settled down for six weeks. When he stepped off the train here six weeks ago he bumped into a woman, who called him down for getting in her way. He attempted to excuse himself but she refused to listen.

Alexandra Tolstoy Banned From British Columbia

Victoria, B. C., April 10—Miss Alexandra Tolstoy, daughter of the Russian novelist, Count Leo Tolstoy, who repeatedly sought permission from the Canadian Government to enter the Dominion until she was ordered by the Soviet Government to return to Russia, has been denied permission to enter British Columbia to edit a Doukhobor newspaper. This fact was well known yesterday at the Government building.

American Boys Make Best Soldiers, Says Gen. Pershing

Baltimore, April 10—"The wide-awake, energetic, enthusiastic American boy makes the best soldier in the world when properly trained," Gen. John J. Pershing declared in accepting a certificate of honorary membership in the Maryland Academy of Sciences yesterday, and said:

"I wish that I could find words to express my sincere appreciation of the honor that has been conferred on me. Speaking, however, of my achievement in a military way, I am always thankful of the fact that I commanded American soldiers, than whom there are none better when it comes to the actual test of battle."

Farrell and His Bride Back From Honeymooning

Other arrivals included Viscountess Harcourt and Sir Wilfred and Lady Grenfell.

Virginia Valli

She is a noted beauty and has skill as a movie player.

Mae Marah to Play Mother Role in Talkie

Hollywood, Cal., April 10 (AP)—Another name famous in the old days of silent motion pictures was added today to the talkie roster.

Mae Marah, who has given the last 11 years to rearing a family, signed a contract with Fox to play the mother in "Over the Hill."

Miss Marah entered pictures in 1913 as a 25-a-week extra, and for two years worked for D. W. Griffith making two-reelers. She came into prominence in 1914 in the lead of "The Birth of a Nation," and added fame came through her characterization in "Intolerance."

After her marriage to Lee Arms, a newspaperman, who has become a short-story writer, Miss Marsh retired in 1920.

WELLESLEY GRADUATE CONFESSES MURDER

Gandhi? Gosh!

Beau Brummel Gandhi in person—as he would have looked if he had worn this immaculate attire when this photograph was taken. No loin cloth there—at least, not in evidence. This is the way he will appear during his London and American visits—if he wears morning garb as he has said he will. (I. N. R. photo.)

POLICE IN RAID ON RED MEN'S GATHERING

150 Foiled in Efforts to Flee as the Vice Squad Ends Springfield Show

Springfield, April 10—The Dance of the Seven Veils turned out to be a dance of at least one jail for Jean Elliot of Hartford, when police broke up a powwow of the local Tribe of Red Men early today.

The vice squad, under Capt. George W. Bicknell, battered down the doors of Red Men's Hall, where 150 men were watching the scantily-clad gyrations of Miss Elliott, and arrested her.

In district court Miss Elliot pleaded guilty to a charge of improper conduct and was fined $100.

They also took two other girls to police headquarters for questioning, together with the chairman of the entertainment committee, but later released them.

The powwow, held in honor of a visiting sachem, broke up in disorder when police invaded the hall.

Windows and doors were guarded, however, and no one was permitted to leave until the police departed with the prisoners.

Miss Elliot, who is 28, told police she was engaged to do the Dance of the Seven Veils, a hula number and a jazz number. She said she conducts the Hartford Amusement Co. She was charged with giving an improper performance.

INFANT STARTS LIFE WITH A REAL TOOTH

Little Virginia Anne MacDonald, three-weeks-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacDonald of 23 Bay st., Dorchester, is proud of the lower tooth she had when she was born in City Hospital. She did not mind her mother helping her to show it for the cameraman.

Baby Virginia, three-weeks-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacDonald of Bay st., Dorchester, will be spared at least part of one of babyhood's sorest trials—the teething process.

Virginia already has the start of a set of teeth. She was born at City Hospital with one glistening white tooth firmly fixed in her lower jaw.

'TEACHER LOVE CULT' BLAMED FOR KILLING

Mrs. Thomsen, 29, Says She Beat the Spinster in Self-Defense, Then Cut Her Throat

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 10 (AP)—Mrs. Frances Thomsen, 29, under arrest here in connection with the death of Miss Minnie Dilley, 76, wealthy spinster, confessed today, police said, that she killed the elderly woman.

"I did it in self defense," she is alleged to have said. "It was her life or mine."

BLAMED QUEER CULT

Mrs. Thomsen told police that Miss Dilley had exercised a "strange influence" over her husband and that she wanted him to become leader of a "love cult composed of former school teachers."

Miss Dilley, who lived alone, was found in her home at Forty-Fort Saturday night with her head battered and her throat cut.

Mrs. Thomsen, a graduate of Wellesley College, was a former neighbor of Miss Dilley and moved to Pittsburgh where she was arrested Wednesday.

Sitting in the same room of the Forty-Fort house where Miss Dilley's body was found, the woman prisoner re-enacted the killing.

Mrs. Thomsen said she struck down Miss Dilley when the spinster attacked her. With the Forty-Fort woman stunned, Mrs. Thomsen said she took a bread knife from her own umbrella and slashed Miss Dilley repeatedly across the throat.

Mrs. Thomsen said that when she went into the house she sat down on the chair she occupied during the confession and that Miss Dilley sat facing her.

"IN SELF-DEFENSE"

Miss Dilley refused "to make friends," however, the prisoner declared, and a quarrel resulted.

"I struck in self defense," she said.

Mrs. Frances Thomsen, held for the "love cult murder" at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was graduated from Wellesley College in 1920. She was then Miss Frances Galpen.

ENVOY PRAISES KELLOGG PACT

"The German Republic, the first of the great powers to adhere to the Kellogg pact, has repeatedly shown its readiness to co-operate toward a better organization of international life."

This was declared today by Dr. Friedrich W. von Prittwitz und Gaffron, German ambassador, at a luncheon given in his honor by Mayor Curley and the city of Boston at the Copley-Plaza.

"The world's present state of depression and maladjustment," he said, "will best be overcome, and its economic equilibrium and better general condition re-established by co-operation and mutual help.

"Since the end of the great war, the idea of replacing armed conflict by arbitration and conciliation has constantly gained ground, a success which finally was crowned by the signing of the Kellogg pact."

At the head table, in addition to the ambassador, were Mayor Curley, Gov. Ely, Kurt von Tippelskirch, German consul in Boston; Maj.-Gen. Fox Conner, commanding-general of the First Corps Area, U. S. Army; Rear Admr. Louis M. Nulton, commandant of the First Naval District; Gen. C. von Knobelsdorf, formerly of the Prussian army; the Rev. Charles F. Disler, S. J., rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity; Prof. Adolph Goldschmidt Kuno Francke, professor of German art and culture at Harvard; Commendatore Giovanni Maria Tio Margotti, Italian consul in Boston; Dr. Joseph Redlich, professor of Harvard Law School and deputy judge of the permanent court at The Hague; Carl F. Kaufman and Edmund L. Dolan, city treasurer.

GRAF ZEPPELIN REACHES CAIRO

London, April 10 (INR)—The Graf Zeppelin, carrying 25 passengers on a cruise of the Mediterranean, arrived over Cairo at 4 p. m. today (9 a. m. Eastern standard time), according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch.

The giant dirigible circled the ancient city several times as thousands of Egyptians cheered.

Jap Cabinet to Quit

Tokyo, April 10 (AP)—Members of the cabinet at a meeting today decided to resign as soon as they settle the question of a successor to Premier Hamaguchi, who is lying seriously ill after an operation.

IRATE PARENTS CROWD COURT

Peabody, April 10—In a courtroom crowded with irate parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ejarnes of Shillaber st., who police say sold liquor to school children, were today found guilty of violations of the prohibition law.

Because of the failure of Joseph Gilmore, principal of the Wallace st. grammar school to appear, the charge of selling liquor to minors was not prosecuted.

Inspector James Murphy told Judge Daniel C. Manning he had evidence the couple had sold wine to a 15-year-old boy and other pupils had helped drink it.

Murphy told the court he originally received a complaint from Principal Gilmore, who informed him a doctor had been called and found the boy suffering from too much wine.

The inspector said later Gilmore had denied the story.

Ejarnes was found guilty of keeping liquor and his wife of keeping it with intent to sell. The husband was given a three months' suspended sentence and Mrs. Ejarnes' case was placed on file.

GREAT SNAKES! 10 OF 'EM, TOO

Ten snakes in your back yard! Oh Boy! Oh Boy! OH BOY!

But Mrs. Henry Martin of 16 South Irving st., Revere, actually saw 10 snakes in her back yard today—thus officially opening what snake season there is, and also opening the way for excitement and the killing of four of the 10.

When Mrs. Martin sighted the 10 wigglers she called four children in from the yard and notified police. Patrolman Michael Mahoney and Health Inspector William Middlebrook hastily snaked their way through traffic to the scene and despatched the four snakes remaining in sight.

The other six, with some sort of snake instinct working, had taken alarm and vanished in a field back of the house.

The snakes killed were 16 and 17 inches long, but Mrs. Martin said there were two of the others at least three feet long. They were all black and green.

2 WOMEN WIN DIVORCES

Two women were granted divorces in uncontested cases before Judge Joseph R. McCool in Suffolk Probate Court today.

Mrs. Mildred Liphenstein Speyer, of 14 Castle Gate st., Back Bay, was granted a divorce on grounds of intolerable cruelty after she testified her husband, Edwin J. Speyer, had taken to excessive drinking after the 1929 stock market crash, in which he lost a large sum.

Mrs. Alice I. Durland, of 1137 Commonwealth ave., Allston, was granted a divorce from Howard L. Durland, on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

She testified he slapped her face on numerous occasions. Judge McCool awarded her $8 a week alimony.

GANDHI NURSES COLD, FEVER

Ahmadabad, India, April 10 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi arrived here today from Amritsar with a white cloth around his head and explained he was still suffering from fever, cold and exhaustion.

He pleaded with the huge crowd that met him not to kill him with love.

He deplored the assassination of a British police official in Midnapore, Bengal, and said India never could achieve independence by such means.

If his health permits, Gandhi will make a three-day speaking tour of the Surat and Guperat districts to urge the peasants to resume payment of taxes in accordance with the terms of the new Delhi truce.

Miss Elizabeth Brown of Back Bay Dies

Miss Elizabeth Bowen Brown, 78, of the Back Bay, a sister of Mrs. Robert L. De Normandie, clubwoman, died today in Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital. Miss Brown was actively interested in the Gwynn Temporary Home for Children and a member of the parish of the Advent in Brimmer st. She was the daughter of the late Atherton Thayer Brown and Sara Hirtley Brown.

ROYAL VISITORS LAND IN N. Y.

New York, April 10 (AU)—Prince and Princess Takamatsu of Japan arrived in the United States today aboard the Aquitania, which was several hours late.

The royal visitors were met at quarantine by an official welcoming party which sailed down the bay on the S. S. Macom.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University headed a special committee appointed by the mayor to receive the imperial party. The federal and state Governments were represented.

Extra guards were assigned to protect Prince and Princess Takamatsu of Japan today after police received reports that communists were planning demonstrations of protest.

Prince Nobuhito Takamatsu and Princess Kikuko Takamatsu of Japan were invited to Boston by Mayor Curley today in a telegram to the visitors.

"It is a pleasure in behalf of the citizens of Boston to extend to your royal highnesses a most cordial welcome to the United States. A royal greeting awaits you in Boston," the telegram read.

WOMAN SUES TO GET OFFICE

Holland, April 1 (AP)—Miss Adeline Howlett, who claims to have been duly elected town clerk, today petitioned the Supreme Court to compel Arthur F. Blodgett, town clerk, to recognize her election and to turn over to her the town seal and records.

She alleges that Blodgett refused to do this, although she said she had qualified and given bonds.

The action is the outgrowth of two town meetings this spring, both of which are alleged by one group to have been illegal. The alleged illegality of the first was based on the claim that the officers to be voted for had been illegally nominated in that the caucus was not attended by a legal number of voters. Legality of the second was questioned because the ballots had been marked in advance by the town clerk.

3 Dead, 14 Hurt in Kentucky Wreck

Somerset, Ky., April 10 (AP)—Three railroad workers were killed and one fatally injured near here today in a head-on collision between two railway motor trucks on the Southern Railway. Thirteen others were injured, six seriously, and it was feared several might die.

Middle-Aged Briton Wants to Take Gigolo Course

Evanston, Ill., April 10 (AP)—Prof. William F. Byron, head of the sociology department of Northwestern University, who recently suggested that the profession of the "gigolo" might some day be recognized in America, revealed today that he since had received many letters of inquiry.

One of the writers, he said, apparently got the erroneous impression that the establishment of a college "gigolo" department was contemplated.

The letter came from a middle-aged man in England, who said he "wanted to take the course."

Scientists to Seek Trace of Ice Age Man

Chicago, April 10 (INS)—Remains of primitive man of the ice age believed to have lived in the Middle West more than 20,000 years ago will be sought by scientists of the National Research Council, who met here today to organize their expedition.

Announcement of the plan was made by Dr. Madison Bentley. He said the excavations undoubtedly would reveal evidence of a prehistoric race that dwelt in this territory long before the Indians.

GNATS KILL 500 FARM MULES

Helena, Ark., April 10 (AP)—The bite of the buffalo gnat infesting this region was blamed today for the death of at least 500 farm animals and the discomfort of many persons.

Fishermen have been forced to abandon their sport because of the gnats, and at least one man has been made ill by the poisonous bites, which are blamed by older residents with causing the death of several persons here in 1884.

The insect, sometimes called the black fly, is about one-fifth of an inch long. Its bite leaves a dull pain.

The gnats attack all animals, but mules are the principal victims. The animal bitten becomes frantic and runs wild.

U. S. Experts Know No Way to Fight Gnat Pest

Washington, April 10 (AP)—Officials at the Department of Agriculture said today there was no known method of controlling buffalo knats, preying on horses and mules in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana.

They said the insect was dependent upon running water for development.

'$20 LOVE IS JUST GRAND!'

Riches aren't everything. In fact, they're just about nothing when weighed against love. That's Mrs. Edward Priestly's valuation and she knows, for she is the former Violette Jolley, 18, Pascoag, R. I., heiress, and she snapped her pink fingers at wealth and eloped with Priestly, a $20-a-week mill hand. Here they are in their humble Hollywood home, two turtle doves. Charles W. Jolley, the big mill man, has forgiven them though, and chances are they won't stay poor. (International Newsreel photo.)

SENATE TO SUE TO OUST SMITH

Washington, April 10 (INS)—The Senate court battle to oust George Otis Smith as chairman of the Federal Power Commission will be started next week, it was announced today following a conference between senators and the Senate's special counsel.

The form of the petition, which the Senate will file in the District Supreme Court attacking Smith's right to hold office, was agreed upon at the conference, attended by Senator Norris (R.), Nebraska, chairman of the judiciary committee; Senator Walsh (D.), Montana, leader of the ouster fight; John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President in 1924, and former Gov. Alexander J. Groesbeck, Michigan, special counsel.

RASKOB JOINS COLLEGE FRAT

New Haven, April 10—John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, now belongs to a college "frat," although he never went to college. He was made an honorary member of the Theta Xi Chapter of Sheffield Scientific School at Yale University last night. He had been the evening's guest.

Among others present when Mr. Raskob was inducted were the National President E. P. Hamilton of New York, and Prof. Charles J. Tilden and Philip G. Laureon of Yale. Mr. Raskob's sons, John J., Jr., and William, deceased, were members of the fraternity while at Yale.

Improper Pictures Cost Him $200 Fine

Haverhill, April 10—Found guilty of having improper pictures in his possession, Albert Cohan, 29, of Washington st., Dorchester, one of six persons arrested after a "stag" show in Newton, N. H., was fined $200.

Two girls, Jean Campbell of Huntington ave., Boston, and Helen Lawler of Dedham parkway, Dedham, with three other men, admitted taking part in the show but denied any connection with the pictures. They were found not guilty.

Papal Radio Waves Registered in U. S.

Vatican City, April 10 (AP)—Wavelengths of 19.84 and 50.26 have been registered at Washington, D. C., and Berne, Switzerland, for the Vatican radio station HVJ, it was announced today.

The Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Pacelli, has begun negotiations with various governments for permission to engage in commercial radio traffic with their respective countries.

OFFICIALS WAR OVER BODY OF SLAIN NURSE

to have Dr. Magrath examine organs removed from the body before it was buried.

Dr. Magrath admittedly is seeking evidence that a resuscitation machine was used on Miss Russell after she was strangled. No such evidence appears in the reports of the Rhode Island doctors. If it can be found, Massachusetts' claim to Hathaway will be greatly strengthened.

DENTIST'S THEORY

A dentist who was treating Miss Russell informed District Attorney Crossley that, unless there were cuts on the lips of the slain girl, the teeth forced from her mouth could only have been forced out by a foreign object.

The dentist said that had he been permitted to view the body he could have established the truth regarding a possible attempt to revive the nurse having been made.

Dist.-Atty. Crossley then disclosed that he had been barred by Rhode Island authorities from attending their autopsy.

On the basis of reports made by the Rhode Island authorities, Atty.-Gen. McLyman said he set the hour of Miss Russell's death at 10 o'clock on the night she went for an automobile ride with Elliott Hathaway.

Between 10 o'clock and the time of Hathaway's arrival at the home of his friend, Vernon V. Galvin, in Fall River, an hour and 15 minutes elapsed.

McLYMAN AT SCENE

"Last night I went over to the scene myself in order to determine how long it would take to drive from where the body was found to Galvin's house," said Atty.-Gen. McLyman, who last Saturday characterized as a "grandstand play" the reenactment of the night's events by Galvin and Massachusetts officials.

"I parked at the entrance to Winward lane," the attorney general continues. "Winward's searchlight was turned on the spot, but despite that fact it would have been impossible for anyone at the Winward house to observe a person on the ground, although it would have been possible for the car to have been seen from there.

"From the scene I drove to Galvin's house, as did Hathaway on the night of the murder. It took 35 minutes.

"The murder was undoubtedly committed in the car. The girl died in the automobile 171 feet from the Winward lane entrance on the Tiverton road.

DIED IN CAR, HE THINKS

"The weather bureau reports that on the night of March 23 the temperature at 7 o'clock was 40 and fell steadily until it touched 33 at midnight.

"In my opinion the weather was too cold for two persons to have left an automobile to walk around or sit on the ground. It is more likely that Hathaway and Miss Russell remained in the car.

"It is very apparent the body was taken out of the car and placed where it was found.

"I do not believe the body was transported by Hathaway to Galvin's house. I believe that when the girl was dead Hathaway placed her on the ground.

"It is a matter of conjecture as to how long Hathaway's car was in the lane. It is a question how long it would take a much excited man to attempt to revive a dead girl.

NOT SURE OF TIME

"A man under such circumstances might sit in a blue funk for a while or he might run away. We do know that Hathaway arrived at Galvin's house at 11:15 o'clock.

"I think that Hathaway, after reaching a decision as to what to do, made a bee-line for Galvin's."

In his reconstruction of the crime, McLyman admitted, there remains between 8:10 p. m., when Hathaway and Miss Russell were seen in Fall River at a store, and the hour he sets at death, an hour and 50 minutes to be accounted for.

"It is very apparent they were driving around a while and then got into the lane," he said.

He said he would ask that whatever records he shows to District Attorney Crossley and Dr. Magrath be treated by them as strictly confidential.

NEW WITNESSES

The new witness located by the Massachusetts authorities is a New Bedford man who knew Hathaway and saw him in Fall River after 8:10 on the murder night.

The new Rhode Island witness, according to Atty.-Gen. McLyman, is a Newport man who was friendly with Galvin and who may clear up some of the hazy points regarding Galvin's relations with Hathaway.

Massachusetts as yet has no positive proof of jurisdiction. Neither, for that matter, has Rhode Island, McLyman admitted. But Rhode Island is unconvinced by Dr. Magrath's opinion, given last night, that the murder was not committed where the body was found in Tiverton, R. I., a few miles from the state line.

The Rhode Island attorney-general attacked the theory of Massachusetts detectives that a doctor had attempted resuscitation of the strangled nurse before her body was left in Tiverton.

He said a Fall River physician already had been questioned and exonerated. No doctor has yet been questioned by Massachusetts officials who have the names of three to be interviewed later.

Further adding to the controversial nature of the case was a demand in the Rhode Island Senate

Calls for Justice

State Senator Isabelle A'Hearn O'Neill of Providence, who has demanded that Gov. Case direct the probe of the slaying of Verna Russell.

that Governor Case take command of the investigation and determine the reason for so much secrecy and withholding of information by the Rhode Island authorities.

The possible inference that something is lacking in the reports of the Rhode Island pathologists.

He said the reports contained no mention of a peculiar blue stain on the clothing of the Fall River nurse. Mention of this stain was made yesterday to Dr. Magrath in Tiverton by Albert Winward, owner of the estate where the body was found and one of the first to view it.

CAN SEE REPORT

Dr. Magrath evinced interest in it. Later he learned that the missing slippers from Hathaway's automobile were blue and expressed his intention of again talking with Winward.

Atty.-Gen. McLyman said he would permit Dr. Magrath to study the autopsy report, but that he would not permit Samuel I. Jacobs of Boston, Hathaway's attorney, to do so unless compelled to by a court order, which Jacobs declared he may seek.

"I don't think Dr. Magrath will think it necessary to perform a second autopsy when he sees our report," said Atty.-Gen. McLyman.

"However, if he does demand one and demonstrates to us that it would be vital, Massachusetts must first prove jurisdiction before I will give my permission.

"At present, Dr. Magrath has no legal right to demand another autopsy. Realizing the importance of the case, I made a special request for a very thorough examination, and Dr. Bryant has made one."

MAGRATH'S OPINION

Dr. Magrath, who went to the spot where the body was found with Dist.-Atty. Crossley and later conferred with State Detectives Stokes, Ferrari and Clemmey, expressed the opinion that the crime was committed nowhere in the vicinity and that possibly two men placed the body on the ground.

Nearly three hours were spent in Tiverton and another hour in conference with the Massachusetts investigators before Dr. Magrath expressed his opinion.

"One man could lift the body and Hathaway was rugged enough to do it," McLyman commented upon the Massachusetts theory that another man, possibly a doctor who attempted to revive her, aided Miss Russell's slayer in taking her body into Rhode Island, where there is no death penalty for murder.

MUM ON STRYCHNINE

The Massachusetts authorities believe that Dr. Magrath, if he was permitted to perform a second autopsy, would find evidence that an effort had been made, probably with oxygen apparatus, to resuscitate Miss Russell.

No such evidence appears in the report of Dr. Bryant, according to Atty.-Gen. McLyman. Whether or not strychnine was found, he continued to refuse to state, although it was pointed out to him that if the defense was aware that strychnine had been used it would be prepared to combat such evidence at the trial regardless of how zealously the attorney-general might guard the report.

One doctor and possibly three will be questioned, Massachusetts authorities said, despite the statement of McLyman that a doctor already had been interrogated and cleared of any suspicion.

The attorney-general stated that Winward noticed a physician at the spot where the body was found two days after the crime and reported to the police and that the doctor was questioned regarding his presence there and gave satisfactory explanation.

Massachusetts detectives maintain that it is significant that the torn teeth broken from the mouth of the victim were not found at the scene until after the visit of this doctor, although a previous minute search for them had been made.

DEMANDS INQUIRY

Resuscitation apparatus forced into the dead girl's mouth in the doctor's office is believed to have dislodged the teeth which, as damaging evidence, later were "planted" in the Tiverton lane.

The Rhode Island Senate bill asking that Governor Case take the investigation into his own hands drew this reply from Atty.-Gen. McLyman.

"I will not dignify the resolution by replying to it."

Senator Isabelle A. O'Neill, Democrat, introduced the order, demanding "a thorough investigation of facts and evidence as will give assurance to the people that an honest endeavor is being made to further the interests of justice and bring the murderer to trial."

It was referred to the committee on special legislation.

Galvin is to be questioned again by both Massachusetts and Rhode Island authorities.

Atty.-Gen. McLyman who previously had expressed the utmost confidence in all details of Galvin's story of his claimed actions with Hathaway on the murder night, declared his belief that Galvin "unconsciously is withholding facts." He will question Galvin tomorrow, he indicated.

Hathaway 'Escape' Brings New Order to Boston Police

A secret order believed to have resulted from the failure of Boston police to capture Elliott R. Hathaway while he was in hiding in Boston was issued in the bureau of criminal investigation today by Asst. Supt. McDevitt.

It was learned that the order decreed that in the future a trained police inspector is to remain on duty at headquarters with the night captain in charge. Capts. Killen, Ridion and Grace alternate on the night shift and neither has had detective bureau experience.

In the past there has been an inspector on duty and when such none the night Capt. Killen learned of the presence in Boston of Hathaway.

MAGRATH ADDS TO HIS LIST OF CRIME CASES

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, called into the Russell murder case by Massachusetts authorities, adds another to "outside" cases that have filled his stormy but busy career as medical examiner for Suffolk County.

To Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and other places he has been called to aid by his knowledge of pathology in intricate problems of death.

Since 1907 when he succeeded Dr. Frank A. Harris as medical examiner, he has been credited with solving deaths through small unnoticed details.

The murder of Mrs. Arlene Small sent him to Mountain View, N. H., in October, 1918. The victim, at first believed to be victim of a fire, was declared murdered and her husband, Frederick L. Small, later paid the penalty.

Skowhegan, Me., on the Bartley murder; Concord, N. H., on the Otterson murder, and Foxcroft, Me., on the murder of Mrs. Phoebe Woodbury were others.

The Cocheco dam murder in New Hampshire of eight years ago, was one of the most difficult of his cases. It was a decomposed body of a youth. When officials were baffled, Dr. Magrath was sent for and it was his autopsy that cleared the way toward solution.

The murder of a Revere woman was brought to light in 1924 by him when he refused to believe a doctor's certificate that showed pernicious anemia.

The autopsy revealed poisoning and the husband of the woman was held as her slayer.

Through his ability to judge the amount of blood that would flow from a wound, he brought the arrest of a Dracut man in 1922. The man had claimed he and a friend had been attacked and his friend killed, but a small wound and much blood on the claimant, didn't check with Dr. Magrath, and arrest followed. It developed the stains were from the blood of his friend, too.

In his 24 years investigating deaths and crime he has never been a defence witness, although he has been sought many times in that capacity.

Kiley was 39, married, and a veteran of the World War. He was manager of the filling station, situated on the Somerville side of the Boston & Maine railroad bridge on the artery. The killing occurred with scores of machines passing.

Somerville police branded the killing as a baiked holdup, ridiculing reports that it was a "thrill" murder.

MAY BE GRUDGE KILLING

A clue indicating that it may have been a grudge crime, committed by friends of youths whose arrest Kiley was said to have caused, was also discarded by Chief Damery after investigation.

The gunmen got no money, but investigators declared that without a doubt Kiley resisted an attempt to rob him—perhaps even lunched the robbers, for that was his nature.

A Revere youth was taken to Somerville for questioning because, according to the police, he owns a car somewhat similar to that used by the slayers, but police later announced he had no connection with the crime.

An autopsy was performed this noon at a Cambridge undertaker's by Medical Examiner Dr. David C. Dow.

Sergt. James J. Heachey and Patrolman James J. Mahoney of the city so division of the Boston police arrested a Charlestown youth at daybreak.

He had a small arsenal in a big black suitcase, the officers declared, but after inquiries Chief Damery of Somerville satisfied himself that he had no connection with the Somerville killing.

CAPONE GUARD WINS LIBERTY

Chicago, April 10 (AP)—Another "public enemy" went free of vagrancy charges today.

Frankie Rio, personal bodyguard of "Scarface" Al Capone, who served a year's jail sentence at Philadelphia with his boss, stood before Judge Francis Borrelli only 30 seconds before his case was dismissed. The police said they had no proof of vagrancy.

Capone was freed recently in a similar manner. The warrants were issued by Judge John H. Lyle, who made a drive against the hoodlums.

BAND LEADER DEFENDS JAZZ

Jazz and the saxophone gained a defender today in Edwin Franko Goldman, New York band leader, who was guest of the Massachusetts Federation of Music Clubs, at Hotel Statler.

Goldman arrived as a member of the American Bandmasters' Association and will take part in the benefit concert Sunday at Mechanics Building.

In addition to defending the saxaphone and jazz music, he cited two modern band leaders, Nat Shilkret and Ferd Grofe, "really superior to the famous composers of ancient times."

The saxaphone was so easy to play that it became an abused instrument, he said, but people are studying and playing it more sanely now.

Jazz for the feet and classics for the head is his rule for music, he said.

Films Make Kind of People Seen on the Screen---Dreiser

Kansas City, April 10 (AP)—Theodore Dreiser says Hollywood is "just a small town with notions" to him.

The novelist renewed a threat to sue Paramount Studios if the filming of his "An American Tragedy" is not satisfactory.

"Motion pictures," he said, "are making the American mind smaller than it is, if that is possible.

"I am not interested in what they are doing to the children of America. I am not interested in children. But motion pictures are making the kind of persons one sees in motion pictures."

LUFKIN ESTATE PAID $127,526

Executors of the estate of John W. Lufkin, wealthy inventor who died in 1929, today filed their first accounting in the Registry of Probate for Suffolk County.

The account details receipts of $878,945 and disbursements of $127,526. Included in the disbursements are many bequests provided for in the will.

Miss Elisabeth A. Lufkin, the testator's sister and one of the executors, objected to the allowance of $37,456 for administration fees. Judge William M. Prest was to have heard her objections today, but postponed action after he learned that a petition had been filed in Norfolk Probate Court asking appointment of a conservator for her.

A court battle raged around the deathbed of the aged inventor, when, at the age of 75, he sought to marry Mrs. Eva Walker, 58, his nurse.

He was declared insane after he had obtained a license to marry Mrs. Walker and had signed an ante-nuptial agreement transferring to her property valued at $200,000.

Pope's Distribution of Vatican Coins Omits Hoover

Vatican City, April 10 (AP)—The Pope is sending through ambassadors sets of the Vatican City coins to the chiefs of all states with which the Vatican maintains diplomatic relations. They are being sent also to all the cardinals.

Since the United States does not recognize Vatican City, President Hoover is not on the list of recipients, but it is believed the Pope later will send Mr. Hoover and a few other persons sets of the issue of 1929.

WIFE DEAD; HINT SUICIDE PACT

Chicago, April 10 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin C. Simmons, with a bullet wound in her head, was found dying today in the arms of her husband, a branch manager for Armour & Co.

Simmons said his wife shot herself accidentally. Police expressed a belief that the couple, grieving over the death a year ago of their 3-year-old daughter, Barbara, had made a suicide pact and that Simmons was discovered by his wife's parents before he could kill himself.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred N. Grant of Dodge Center, Minn., heard the shot, rushed to the kitchen of the Simmons Rogers Park home, and found Mrs. Simmons embracing her husband.

It's Cheaper to Move Than to Pay Rent!

The South End Spring Co. of Boston felt that way about it. They decided that they were in rather expensive quarters so they are moving to where their rent will be very much less. They are makers of High Grade Day Beds, as you know, and they had about 200 Day Beds which they did not want to take with them. So we bought them at 50c on the dollar — and starting tomorrow — you can buy them the same way! We're including other exceptional Bed and Bedding purchases at ½ price, too!

BIG GUNS GUARD RULERS OF PORTUGAL

Lisbon, Portugal, April 10 (AP)—President-General Carmona and members of his cabinet today conducted the Portuguese government from the interior of the Third Artillery barracks, a virtual fortress, protected by barbed wire entanglements, machine gun and artillery emplacements.

Troops guarded public buildings and held strategic points in Lisbon and Oporto in an obvious effort to prevent the spreading to the mainland of the revolt which has overturned the authority of Lisbon in Maderia and yesterday flared in the Azores, another east Atlantic island group belonging to Portugal.

En route to the Azores, the steamer Lima was recalled by wireless by her owner who said they had been informed that both Sao Miguel and Ponta Delgada were in the hands of rebel forces.

Advices of the Azores revolt were contained in cablegrams received by the premier. One message came from Lieut Aragao y Mello, as head of the Azores movement, and announced that that island had decided to sever relations with Lisbon.

In the barracks the president and cabinet have placed themselves virtually in the hands of the 3d Artillery, a model Iron Brigade which has an unbroken record of distinguished service to the republic.

Funchal, Maderia, April 9 (AP)—(Delayed)—A force from the British cruiser London, sent to Funchal when the revolt broke out last week, was landed here today.

The populace received the landing party with enthusiasm. The cruiser was sent here to protect British nationals and their property.

Republican Stand on Prohibition Urged

Charles R. Smith, president of the Young Men's Republican Club of Springfield at a reception tendered officers of that organization in the Huntington Chambers, 30 Huntington ave., by the Young Men's Republican Social League of Boston, called upon the Republican State Committee, last night, to take some definite action with reference to the party's stand on the prohibition question.

Held as Killer

GORDON ARREST CHEERS POLICE

New York, April 10 (AP)—Police today were jubilantly proclaiming the solution of the Vivian Gordon murder case, while Harry Stein, known along Broadway as a racketeer, drug pedlar and thief, was held without bail for examination Tuesday on a charge of suspicion of homicide.

Three other men are under arrest as material witnesses, and a fourth for alleged possession of firearms and burglars' tools.

A fifth man is hunted as driver of the death car and police said today they will have him soon.

The murder came at a time when Vivian Gordon was to give testimony in the investigation of the police vice squad that she had once been "framed." Miss Gordon's body, a rope knotted around the throat, was found in Van Cortlandt Park, Feb. 23.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney said that Stein had been under suspicion since the killing. It is the police theory that the motive for the killing was robbery.

$8000 DEFICIT IS REVEALED IN TAUNTON FUNDS

A deficit of $8000 in the finances of the city of Taunton was reported to Mayor Willis K. Hodgman, Jr., of that city today by Theodore M. Waddell, director of the State Division of Accounts.

Director Waddell also criticized the City Council for transferring $30,000 from surplus revenue for use of the assessors in fixing the tax rate for 1930, when there was no free cash available in the surplus.

Many thousands of dollars in taxes for the years 1925 to 1929 remain uncollected, he said, and the large uncollectable portion of these "will naturally increase the revenue deficit."

The balance sheet of last November 30 showed a revenue surplus of $13,618.17, but therew as a deficit in the overlay account for the years 1926-1930, inclusive, and overdrawn appropriation accounts aggregating $21,936.50, Waddell said, "so in reality there was a deficit of revenue of $8000 on November 30."

He questioned the legality of an appropriation of $600 for American Legion headquarters, stating that it was understood the Legion owned the building in which the quarters are situated.

Waddell also questioned the legality of two amounts, $811.25 in 1930 and $425 in the first three months of this year, turned over to the board of health.

U. S. Worse Off Than Britain, Says Premier

Woolwich, Eng., April 10 (AP)—Ramsay MacDonald in a letter of encouragement to George Hicks, Labor candidate in the East Woolwich bye-election, declared:

"The public is increasingly realising that Great Britain, despite formidable difficulties, is weathering the world depression better than other highly industrial countries."

The prime minister asserted that "highly protected" Germany and the United States were suffering far more severely.

Soviet Has Plan to Stop Cotton Import

Moscow, April 10 (AP)—Plans of the Soviet government to increase Russia's cotton output over 50 per cent in 1931 will deal something of a blow to the country's imports from America if the plan is realized.

Nearly 6,000,000 acres will be planted this year under the present plan. Imports of cotton in 1930 were 57,330 tons, of which 20,806 tons came from the United States. By 1932 the government expects cotton imports will cease.

Men Turn Reins of Town Over to Women

Mt. Ida, Ark., April 10 (AP)—At the wish of men, women are to run this town. Mrs. J. G. McLane, mayor, and a Council of women were nominated by men and elected unanimously.

with two trousers

1133 expensively tailored suits that ordinarily would be marked $45

Most stores would label this a "sensational sale". We, at Bond's consider it just another good example of how much more we can save for our customers because we make the clothes we sell.

Here, briefly, is the family history of this splendid group of suits—Fabrics, born and bred to grace the displays featured along the upper reaches of New York's exclusive Fifth Avenue, Styles, created in London by a custom tailor, who boasts of a Royal Warrant. Tailoring carefully done by hand to insure a long life and a healthy one.

The $15 saving should convince a lot of men, who have been paying fancy prices, that this might be a very good time to change clothiers.

BREWER IS HELD FOR $150,000 IN KIDNAPING

Monroe, Wis., April 10 (AP)—Fred J. Blumer, 50, a Monroe brewer of near beer and former president of the Wisconsin Brewers' Association, today apparently was in the hands of kidnapers demanding $150,000 for his release.

Blumer, described by friends as not wealthy enough to meet such a demand, disappeared last night after he had left his home to keep an appointment with a man who telephoned.

His disappearance was followed by an anonymous telephone call from Rockford, Ill., in which a man notified R. C. Wells of the ransom demand. While the call came from Rockford, it was represented as having been made from Freeport, Ill.

"Blumer is safe," said the caller. "He will not be hurt if we get the $150,000. Tell his wife not to worry and come yourself to Freeport. You'll find Blumer's car parked here."

New Yorkers Save More Than Ever

New York, April 10 (AP)—Citizens of New York State are saving money as they never have before. A report of the Saving Bank Association of the State, published today, shows that deposits increased $181,500,000 during the first quarter of the year.

That's more than the gain for any full year in the past except 1930, when the increase was $210,-234,000. And it's exclusive of interest credits.

Why Suffer Longer From Ills That Konjola Time and Again Has Conquered?

If you endure sleepless nights, the misery of rheumatism and neuritis, and the agony of indigestion and constipation, then here is a message that will interest you.

MR. ALBERT F. KOBS

In case after case, even where all else tried had failed, Konjola has brought amazing relief. Konjola is designed to go right to the source of the common ailments, cleansing and stimulating the ailing organs as it goes, and to bring glorious and abundant relief. Get rid of the idea, if you have it, that Konjola is "just another medicine." Get a treatment of Konjola . . . from six to eight bottles . . . take it regularly. There is every reason to believe that what Konjola has done for others it will do for you. Visit the Konjola man at Epstein's drug store, Scollay Square, Boston; let him tell you of case after case like that of Mr. Albert F. Kobs, 295 Allston Street, Cambridge, who says:

"Konjola deserves my praise. Indoor work and lack of exercise was the cause of my ill-health. My nerves were shot to pieces; I was restless and jumpy, and never slept well at night. I was always tired out before noontime, and my appetite was very poor. Three bottles of Konjola gave me real results. My nerves have quieted down wonderfully; I sleep soundly . . . better than I have for months. I have energy in the mornings and food seems to help me more. My appetite is fine. Konjola helped me more than anything else I tried."

Profit by the experience of those who know, by actual test and experience, what Konjola can do. Quit experimenting, quit groping as if in the dark for the medicine you need. Why search longer, why keep on being disappointed, why look in vain for the medicine that fits your case. Give Konjola a chance . . . that is all that is asked for it. For best results a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles is recommended. Demand Konjola and get it; don't accept a substitute.

The Konjola Man is at the Epstein drug store, Scollay Square, Boston, where daily he is telling the story of this amazing medicine. Konjola is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

EIGHT GIRLS DIVIDED FIVE BANANAS A DAY

Jobless, They Found that Fruit Had More Sustenance, ... Tells Group.

An apple a day may keep the doctor away, but a banana a day may sustain life, according to this story of how eight unemployed young girls lived several days on less than one banana a day each here in New York.

"The girls found that ten cents' worth of bananas had more sustenance than ten cents' worth of any other sort of food," ... of the State Industrial Board, told ... Mrs. ... of the Women's ... fund Committee, yesterday. "They managed to scrape up $2 a week among themselves, and after paying ... rent on a dingy furnished room, ... spent the rest on bananas. ... less than a ...

Clippings reproduced from New York newspapers, March 18-19, 1931

How else could they buy so much energy and food value for ten tiny pennies a day?

YOU probably saw the story in the papers—how eight plucky girls . . . out of a job . . . kept themselves going on ten cents a day for the crowd! They spent the ten cents for BANANAS! Plain smart, we call it. For those girls knew what a lot of people are finding out this tough year . . . you can't buy more food value for your money than you get in bananas.

Count Luckner—the Sea Devil—could tell you how nourishing they are. He saw bananas bring the blood rushing back to black, broken lips . . . take the swelling out of hard, aching tongues . . . change six half-dead, crawling men into a vigorous, spirited crew, ready to go out and roam the seven seas again.

DOCTORS could and do tell you. They order ripe bananas peeled, crushed, and fed by the spoonful to undernourished babies . . . and watch them make almost overnight strides to normal health and vigor. And we could tell you a lot more. But the story boils down to one simple, biting statement: Bite for bite, bananas give you more energy and food value for less money than almost anything else you buy from the fruitman or grocer. This is the year of years to get your money's worth. Put bananas on every market list . . . cut yourself a bigger slice of health. Buy bananas and have more money left in your pocketbook.

BANANA WITH MEATS . . . Fry in butter; or dip in beaten eggs and crumbs and brown in deep, hot fat. Tantalizing main dish with chops, or steak!

BANANA-ORANGE JUICE COCKTAIL . . . Pour a glass of orange juice over a sliced banana! Watch it perk up appetites . . . try it tomorrow for breakfast, lunch or dinner!

Peel a bite of health

WAR NURSE IN FIGHT FOR U. S. CITIZENSHIP

Washington, April 10 (AP)—Marie Averil Bland, a Canadian World War nurse, now residing in New York city, vigorously protested to the Supreme Court today against the refusal of the government to admit her to citizenship unless she agreed to take up arms in its defense.

The appeal of the government to set aside an order of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals declaring her qualified for naturalization will shortly be reached in the Supreme Court for oral argument.

For nine months Miss Bland nursed shell-shocked United States soldiers at Brest, France, immediately following the World War. In her brief she declared she was willing to nurse wounded in the event of war, going to the front line if necessary, to give medical aid and attention, and insisted that her religious beliefs and convictions which forbade her to bear arms or kill any human being, even in war, did not disqualify her from becoming a good American citizen.

She explained that unlike Rosika Schwimmer, who was denied citizenship by the Supreme Court, she had no intention or desire to attempt to influence others to become pacifists or religious objectors.

Doomed Negroes Are Checked in Jail Riot

Gadsden, Ala., April 10 (AP)—Protesting against their sentences, eight Negroes condemned to death at Scottsboro yesterday for attacking two white girls, rioted in the Etowah County jail today, but were subdued by guards, who placed them in irons.

Bank Depositors to Meet Tonight

To further plan for the organization of a protective committee to represent them, depositors of the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co. will meet tonight in the Dorchester High School for Girls, Codman sq.

Frank Wilson will preside. The Industrial Bank & Trust Co., with 5600 Greater Boston depositors, was closed by order of the state bank commissioner, Arthur Guy.

Hollis Wins Fight on Baiting Wildfowl

Massachusetts wildfowl found a champion today in Senator Arthur Hollis of Newton, who led a fight in the Senate against a bill to legalize the baiting of wildfowl by hunters.

The bill was defeated after Hollis had attacked it as unsportsmanlike and conducive to the wholesale slaughter of game birds by luring them to shooting blinds with bait.

Hindenburg Curbs Steel Helmet Organ

Berlin, April 10 (AP)—President von Hindenburg once more found it necessary today to rap the steel helmet organization of which he is honorary president.

Publication of its official organ Der Stahlehelm was suspended for three months on the ground that recent articles favoring a plebiscite to dissolve the Prussian diet were "insulting to the regime."

Wife of Jockey Club Head Wins Divorce

San Diego, Cal., April 10 (AP)—Mrs. Vera Crofton had obtained a divorce today from James N. Crofton, president of the Agua Caliente Jockey Club.

Mrs. Crofton said Crofton had been indifferent to her two years. Her maid testified Crofton was irritable. A property settlement was made out of court.

Oil and Fuel at Oslo for Wilkins' Boat

Oslo, Norway, April 10 (AP)—A ton of lubricating oil and ten tons of fuel oil have been provided at Tromsoe in preparation for the submarine Polar trip of Sir George Hubert Wilkins. These supplies will be used on the trip of the Nautilus from northern Norway to Svalbard.

Thirty tons of fuel oil and three tons of lubricating oil will be cashed at Advent Bay, Svalbard.

India's Trade Cut a Fourth

New Delhi, April 10 (AP)—During the year ended Dec. 31, 1930, India lost nearly one-fourth of her foreign trade, a loss which is regarded as a misfortune of the first magnitude and necessitating a drastic increase in taxes and duties.

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

SYNOPSIS: Chink Dorson's name is signed to a confession beside the murdered "Spider" Schlitz. John Waye, who placed it there, tells the crooks at Dr. Charters' nursing home that he will remain with them until Dorson hangs. Charters, who had once cheated Dorson and Schlitz of their shares of loot, would be secretly pleased should Dorson also be removed. Meanwhile, he can't get rid of Waye. The exposure of Charters' thickery of Dr. MacAdoo and Mr. James in making a private deal to poison Marjorie Lauderdell so that her aunt might gain her fortune causes the plot to be dropped. James, however, decides to get the girl's fortune through marriage. He enters her room, where his proposal is rejected. Nurse Jones indignantly interrupts his intrusion. She is his wife—their relation concealed from the patients.

CHAPTER 22

A Suspicious Wife

"COME TO my room," Nurse Jones had said quietly, as Mr. James closed Marjorie's door.

"Now," said she when they had entered that sanctuary, "what's the game? I'd tear your throat out if I found you double-crossing me with another woman. You know what I was when you first tempted me, as decent a girl as any in England or America, and you know what you made me."

"Aw! Cut that out," snarled Mr. James. "There's too much comes out of your face."

"Yes, and I'll cut your heart out, if you give me cause. When you took me out of nursing, and out of a decent life, you took me for keeps, and don't you forget it. I know enough about you, James Gryde, to send you to the chair. Now then, what's your game with this Lauderdell piece?"

A Rakeoff

"Well, I'll tell you. The Boss has weakened on a proposition that meant a helluva fine wad. This Lauderdell skirt was brought here by an old-time side-kicker of his. The girl comes into 100,000 sterling when she's 21. And if she doesn't live to win it, the Boss's old pal gets it, because her husband's the girl's uncle and heir."

"And if her clock stops before it strikes 21, the Boss gets a rakeoff?" she observed.

"He gets 10 per cent, and the fool's throwing in his hand because Waye knows all about it. The Boss has thrown his old pal down—and us, too. Not that the old devil was going to share that ten thousand."

"Double-cross us?" asked Louie the Lady.

"You said it . . . Well, we'll double-cross him. We'll do the job and I'll go and collect from Maud—the Boss' pal—double the rake-off."

"You speaking the truth—for once?"

"Course I'm speaking the truth. Go and ask the Old Man, if you don't believe me. He'll wonder if the gardener and the butler are going to inquire next."

"P'raps I will. Meantime, s'pose you just mention what you were doing in that girl's room. If she comes into cash when she's 21, were you thinking of inheriting the lot as her fake husband?"

"My, what a mind you've got!" ejaculated Mr. James.

"Yes, Jimmy—how long have I had the benefit of your teaching? What were you doing in that room?"

Snooping

"Did you ever hear of a wise crook casing an eye on the lie of the land?"

"Or on the girl?" sneered Louie the Lady.

"Sister, did I say you make me tired? Listen. Did you ever hear of a gunman learning the habits of the man he was going to bump off? Did you ever hear of a yeggman going to have a look at the premises where they keep the safe he's going to blow? I went into that girl's room to see for myself where she keeps her drinks, and medicines and so on. D'you think I want to go snooping round in the night and have her wake up when I knock something over?"

"You were talking to her."

"Course I was, when I found her there. Hadn't I got to make it look natural?"

"Well, what's the game?"

"Oh, I'll weaken on it now, like the Boss. And you'll lose your half of $50,000 or more, for your cleverness . . . Real valuable partner you are!"

"When have I failed you? Haven't I done the wiest . . . Were you going to ask me to help you, Jimmy?"

"Course I was. But now I . . ."

"What is it you want me to do, Jimmy?"

"Get hold of Mancel's coffin-drops, that stuff he reckons he's the only white man who has got the lowdown on. D'you know where he keeps it?"

"No, but I can get anything I want out of Mancel," boasted Nurse Jones.

So? And you're jealous if I go into the girl's room on business! What'll you tell Mancel you want the poison for?"

That it's for a cat I want to get rid of."

"Gee! And so it is!" laughed Mr. James.

Armed, Alert

When Mr. James, as he regularly did, moved about the house in the night and small hours of the morning his silence and comparative invisibility were remarkable.

Armed and alert, he acted as though a dangerous enemy might attempt entry—such as he who entered the house of Mr. Webb of Wilberby End—to slay and rob.

There had been, a year or two ago, a story about a maid, who, going to bed quite sane, was discovered later to be quite insane. The silly creature could only babble of the black bogey in the corridor.

And now Mrs. Meekins, the housekeeper, was telling Mr. Board, the butler, that here was Ella Sprague, that pretty housemaid, wanting to leave.

Her tale was that she crept out of the room where she and two others slept, and went down to the floor below to ask the nurse to give her something for a raging toothache.

As she got to the bottom of the staircase, she saw, according to her account, "an awful black thing" pass the end of the corridor, and, as she stood, trembling in terror, another—a bigger one—went past the same spot. The next thing she knew was that she was half-lying at the bottom of the stairs and as cold as death. When she had "come round a bit more," she had crept to her room, her toothache completely cured.

"Have her up before the doctor," opined Mr. Board. "That gel thought she'd like to make a sensation and get a bit o' importance."

And yet, despite Mr. Board and his opinion of the maid's veracity, the shadow that was Mr. James had, upon occasion, a shadow, though he did not cast it.

Mr. John Waye, who slept little and mostly by day, was invariably awake between the hours of 10 when nurses went off duty for the night, and six in the morning, when nurses and daylight did appear. Some part of the night he spent in writing, some in reading, and at certain hours he sat in darkness and in thought, his sad face grim.

It was his unvarying practice to sit facing the door of his room, and to keep that door wide open. The night nurse, passing on her rounds at midnight, would see him and he would see her, or any one else who might pass.

When the night nurse had made her rounds, and switched off all lights save at corners, staircases or intersecting corridors, Mr. Waye, armed with a black pin and a reel of black cotton, would dart across the corridor, stick the pin in the top of the walnscot, attach the end of the cotton thereto, and return to his door. Here he would break the cotton free its reel, and, passing the end of this detached piece through the key-hole, would tie it to his little finger, and then, seating himself in his armchair, draw it taut.

Thus, across the dark corridor, ran an invisible line of communication that would be tugged and broken by any passer-by, and Mr. Waye be instantly aware of the fact. Nor would the prowler suppose that his silent passing was recorded.

And, this night, as was his custom, John Waye sat on guard.

Rosemary . . . Marjorie . . . Would they, at the same age, have been indistinguishable? How his heart had leapt, and how nearly he had cried "Rosemary" before them all when first his eyes had fallen upon her. Darling beautiful Marjorie!

Suddenly the little finger of John Waye's sensitive hand felt a slight but quite perceptible twitch.

Convulsive twitching—and then death! Dr. MacAdoo's poison does its work well—and unexpectedly—tomorrow.

BRITISH FLIER SETS RECORD

Port Darwin, North Australia, April 10 (AP)—Charles W. A. Scott landed here today and set a record for flight between England and Australia.

He concluded in 9 days 3 hours 20 minutes a trip of 11,000 miles over the plains, mountains and forests of Eurasia and the Malay Archipelago.

His mark was better by 19 hours and 40 minutes than the former record established by Commander Kingsford Smith, hero of both Pacific and Atlantic flights, last October. Kingsford Smith's time was 9 days 23 hours.

Scott, a former royal airforce officer, left England at 5 a. m. (midnight E. S. T.) Wednesday, April 1, flying by way of Belgrade, Alepo, Bushire, Karachi, Rangoon and Surabaya.

B.C. Debaters Win in Loyola Contest

Baltimore, Md., April 10—Boston College defeated Loyola College in debate last night in the college library at Evergreen.

The subject for discussion was "Resolved; That the Application of the Elastic Clause of the Constitution Has Resulted in an Over-Centralization of Authority in the Federal Government."

About People You Know in Boston Stores

By FRANCES L. BAIRD

HINTS GIVEN IN ARTICLE

"The good will of any organization depends entirely upon those who represent it. Too little alert attention is paid to maintaining prestige."

So says Miss Ruth M. Chamberlain, personnel director for E. T. Slattery Co., in an article on "The Importance of Selection and Training of Salespersons," which will appear in "Retailing."

Miss Chamberlain explains how a trained, intelligent sales staff not only lessens operating costs but helps to solve the problem of returned goods. Her article is based on study, experience and observation.

RUM SHIP DEATH DEFENDED

Washington, April 10 (AP)—A vigorous defense of the coast guard's use of forceful measures to capture the rum-laden Canadian schooner Josephine K off New York harbor three months ago has been transmitted to the State Department by the Treasury.

Attorney-General Mitchell is expected to submit to the State Department within a day or two his opinion on legal aspects of the case. The opinion was asked by Secretary Stimson after the Canadian Government protested the seizure.

The Ottawa Government contended the Josephine K was outside the hour's sailing distance from shore, within which treaty rights permit search and seizure of British vessels by American authorities. It also held that the firing of a one-pound shell which killed the vessel's master, Captain William P. Cluett, constituted unwarranted force.

The coast guard replied the vessel was within treaty distance from shore and that the force employed was necessary.

Dockweiler Takes Issue With Raskob

Los Angeles, April 10 (AP)—Isidore Dockweiler, Democratic national committeeman from California, said today he would not support the proposal of John J. Raskob to make prohibition modification a Democratic platform plank.

"When the right time comes I shall favor the suggestion of the Wickersham commission for modification under congressional control," Dockweiler said, "but I'm absolutely against introducing the prohibition issue into the coming campaign."

Pilots Act to Stop Flying Accidents

London, April 10 (INS)—Ninety per cent of civilian flying accidents are avoidable and are due to the fact that private pilots are not given adequate instruction.

This charge, leveled by competent observers as the result of a number of civilian flying accidents, has resulted in the formation of the Guild of Air Pilots, to guard the interests of commercial pilots, which plans to get private flying put on an equal footing with the Royal Air Force.

DEB AND MOTHER WALK TO LUNCHEON

MISS HALLOWELL

MISS NANCY HALLOWELL with her mother, Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell of Chestnut Hill, snapped on their way to luncheon at the home of Mrs. Robert Stowe Bradley on Commonwealth ave.

Straw Hats Are Now in the Lead

By ANN ARDEN

EVEN THOUGH Paris has done little to change the silhouette of frocks and coats, in her hats she has indulged all the dips and flares she has so nobly refrained from introducing elsewhere. It is almost as difficult to put your finger on an outstanding type from the openings as it is to try to write a complete picture of the new hat mode

STRAW IS the queen of May! You become dazzled by the variety of textures you may choose in your straw hats for spring and summer. And as far as shape is concerned, straws can twist themselves about as versatilely as the beloved old felt. And speaking of felts, it is evident that this material will have its brother blooming for sport and semi-sports events.

* * *

THE REAL secret of the new hats is individuality—you will find that hats have an infinite number of categories and that you must choose each one as a distinctive personality of its own. To have brims—huge ones that flare up and out from shallow crowns or brief ones that dip in unusual ways. There are formal hats for evening, little rough straws and cleverly trimmed felts for less formal use. There are trimmings and trimmings—feathers, flowers, ribbons. It is for you to choose the one for your costume—the one that will lend the greatest piquancy to you.

HATS ARE a paradox as Paris shows them. The crown creeps back on the head to show the hairline, while the brim makes an effort to frame the face. Paris is in love with bright hats and she cannot resist the temptation to color contrast even here. The rage is as bad as backgammon.

A DRAPED straw turban is smart, and correct with one's spring suit or coat. The model pictured is in brown baku-ette, a modified tricorn, its cuff brim moulded to two small loops one side, a group of vari-colored feathers mark the back, and longer line on opposite side. The larger hat is also brown, a linen baku with very shallow crown its brim flaring gracefully from bandeau. Brown ribbon faces the brim edge, while two tone feathers, brown and beige, are posed on left side.

SHOW INDIVIDUALITY

Japanese Royalty Invited to Spring Supper Dance

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF JAPAN have been invited to the spring supper dance and fashion review to be held in the Hotel Statler ballroom on Friday evening, April 24, under the sponsorship of the People's Symphony Orchestra. An invitation will also be sent to Miss Vilma Banky of "Cherries Are Ripe" to appear in person at the show and perhaps to model in the fashion review. Other stage celebrities will attend in costume and greet the guests.

MISS ALISON TOWLE AND Miss Anne Sutton, two petite post-debutantes, will serve as pages and announce the entrance of the mannikins, who will serve as models for costumes of Alfred Rothnie. Mr. Rothnie was in Boston yesterday to select his models from the following group of society maidens: Nancy Hallowell, Caroline Hunnewell, Sally Wambolt, Barbara Young, Charlotte Lyman, Polly Proctor, Elizabeth Howe, Elizabeth Denham, Charlotte Ray, Mrs. Leslie Cutler, Madeline Post, Kitty Talbot, Louise Fessenden and Priscilla Simonds.

MRS. ROBERT STOWE BRADLEY is leaving for New York on Sunday to be gone a few days, returning Wednesday or Thursday of next week.

MRS. J. WILLARD WHEELER of Chestnut Hill has sailed for France to meet her daughter Miss Jane Wheeler, who has been in school in Paris. They will stay long enough to shop for Miss Jane, who will be a debutante of the coming season, and return home in time for her presentation. A sister, Miss Elizabeth, came out last year and is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club.

Many Dinner Parties to Precede Balls on Tonight's Calendar

THERE ARE A NUMBER of dinner parties planned for the young set this evening, preceding the sub-debutante dance at The Country Club. Mrs. Edward Miles, Mrs. Malcolm Eaton and Mrs Allen Weatherby are giving a progressive dinner party for the sub-sub debs. Other hostesses will be Mrs Winthrop Coffin, whose daughters, Miss Hannah and Miss Gertrude, will attend; Mrs. Joseph Pratt, who has a sub-debutante daughter, Miss Rosamond; Mrs. Roger B. Conant, with her daughter, Miss Emily, and Mrs. Donald Mercer.

MANY DINNER PARTIES are being given before the Longwood Cricket Club dance this evening for the older group, post-debs and their friends. Mrs. Walter Evatt is having a dinner party at which her three charming daughters, Misses Catherine, Marjorie and Jean, will assist as hostesses, and another daughter, Mrs. G. Winthrop Brown (Emily Evatt), will also have a group to dinner at her home in Chestnut Hill. Ruby Newman and his orchestra will furnish the music for dancing from 9 until 2 o'clock. The proceeds will go to the Children's Hospital.

THE MISSES HARRIET FULLER, Caroline Hunnewell and Eleanor H. Wells, debutantes of this season, are sailing on Monday on a Mediterranean cruise. Their respective parents will give a bon voyage dinner party for them in New York prior to their going on board.

THE GEORGE U. CROCKERS have opened their all-year-round house at Cohasset and will go down there this week

Belmont matrons have organized themselves into a circle of the Florence Crittenton League, it is announced, with Mrs. J. Harold Parry as the president.

Other officers include Mrs. W. H. Short, treasurer; Mrs. H. W. Stevens, secretary; Mrs. Alfred Barnard, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. M Oliva, chairman, refreshments, Mrs. E. F. Hathaway, chairman, bazaar; Mrs. W. C. Hanson, chairman, program; and Mrs. H. W. Clarke, chairman, membership.

A group of young matrons from the circle will visit the Florence Crittenton Maternity Home and Welcome House next Wednesday.

The monthly meeting of St. Joseph's Guild for Aged Women will be held Sunday afternoon at the home, 221 Center st., Dorchester with Rev. John Sexton as the guest speaker. The Cunio Sisters, a talented trio, will entertain with a musical program.

A charity bridge and whist is to be held at St. Matthews Chapel Hall, Norfolk st., Dorchester, next Thursday evening at 8.15 p. m. Mrs. J. J. Doolan has charge of the affair, assisted by a number of prominent Dorchester Catholic women.

Mayor James M. Curley, Miss Mary Curley, Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge and Mrs. Russell, Edward Billman, president of the Boston Kiwanis Club, and H. P. Porter, first vice-president of the Rotary Club of Boston, are to be the special guests of the Zonta Club luncheon at the Hotel Statler tomorrow at 1 p. m.

The luncheon-meeting will be the first of the two-day convention of the Eastern Regional District Clubs, bringing prominent and outstanding women in industrial and professional fields to the city.

The welcome of the city will be officially extended to the delegates at noon tomorrow by Mayor Curley.

The Junior League of the Women's Italian Club will hold its annual spring dance next Friday in the Repertory Hall, Boston. Miss Louise Rotti, president, has charge of the arrangements.

This group is active in charitable and philanthropic affairs. For years the girls have visited the Home for Italian Children.

HOOVER HEARS WOMEN DRYS AT CAPITAL

Washington, April 10 (AP)—Approximately a score of prominent women prohibition advocates gathered today and presented to President Hoover a composite report on prohibition from the feminine viewpoint.

The group had planned to present their plea for more strict enforcement to the President Saturday, but because of the death of Bobbie Longworth the President arranged to meet the women's delegation today, prior to his departure for Cincinnati to attend the Longworth funeral.

Copies of the document, described as "supplementing the Wickersham report," are to be sent to Secretary Mellon, Atty.-Gen. Mitchell and Chairman Wickersham of the law enforcement commission.

Those preparing the reports include Mrs. William Pattangall, Augusta, Me.; Mrs. Richard C. Cabot, Cambridge, Mass., and Martha Brooks Brookings of Massachusetts and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, formerly of Boston.

UNIFORM SUGAR PRICES SET

Paris, April 10 (AP)—The world sugar conference today reached an agreement on a uniform price of sugar.

The agreement provides that when the price of sugar has reached two cents a pound f. o. b. Cuba the export quotas would be increased by 5 per cent. This would mean about 252,000 tons in the aggregate for the seven countries signatory to the agreement.

A permanent international sugar council is to be created which will have an option, whenever the price reaches 2¼ cents, to increase the export quota by 2½ per cent additional. The export quota then shall be increased another 2½ per cent.

Postal Receipts Drop

Washington, April 10 (INS)—The Postoffice Department announced today that postal receipts at 50 selected cities during March had dropped from $32,474,635.96 in 1930 to $30,178,278.67 this year, or a decrease of 7.07 per cent.

Indigestion, Gas, Pain, For 3 Years. Stops it Quick!

"I had a mean case of acid indigestion for the past three years," writes Mrs. Adeline Beljean, Brooklyn, N. Y. "Tried everything with little if any results. Then heard about ACIDINE and got some. It is wonderful. I can eat everything without gas or pain. Sleep fine."

ACIDINE is entirely different from other known remedies. Contains the marvelous digestant, Japtase. In the laboratory experiments Japtase has been tested on certain starchy foods which cause so much stomach distress. It digested 400 times its weight of such foods in only 30 minutes! Five other scientific ingredients stop burning, sour, soothe irritated stomach linings, stop gas and headache from acidity. No other known remedy contains this combination to end acid stomach pain.

Don't run chances of dangerous, painful troubles from acidity. Get ACIDINE today and note quick relief from sourness, pain and belching. You can eat, drink and smoke all you like. Results guaranteed. If not delighted maker refunds money.

SHIPS SELF AS BOX OF HATS

Havr., France, April 10 (AP)—Louis Chianese is on his way to the United States aboard the steamer Lafayette, realizing the dream of a lifetime. But he nearly lost his life trying to be a consignment of hats.

Louis had himself crated and shipped. His grandfather heard of the ruse and notified the Lafayette's captain by radio.

The boat was two days out and the boy was near death from suffocation when members of the crew released him from the box. He will reach New York but must return by the same steamer.

At the same time he urged action by the states on their portion of the program.

"The sooner that unified and constructive action is taken by the states," he wrote, "the better for everyone concerned."

Mrs. Young Found Only Slightly Hurt

Van Hornesville, N. Y., April 10—Injuries of Mrs. Ida Young, 92, mother of Owen D. Young, who fell at her home last Sunday, today were diagnosed as a slight skull fracture and bruises.

Young, the chairman of the board of the General Electric Company, was expected to arrive here from Phoenix, Ariz., today. His mother's condition is not regarded as critical.

HOOVER TO EAT FIRST SALMON

Washington, April 10 (AP)—President Hoover will eat the first salmon to be taken from the Bangor Pool in Bangor, Maine.

Dr. George Otis Smith, a native of Maine, presented the big fish to him today.

Last year the first salmon taken from the pool was sent to the President to be presented in a ceremony but the fish unfortunately got into the hands of the White House cook and was eaten before Mr. Hoover knew it was that particular fish.

This year care was taken to see that the trophy did not get to the kitchen before some distinguished citizen of Maine could call the President's attention to the fact it was an unusual salmon.

Remove carefully the Humidor Pack from a package of Camels and fill it with water. If you have not injured the seal at the corner you will note that it holds the water perfectly without leaking.

Now make the same test with the ordinary Cellophane or glassine wrapping found on other brands. See how quickly the water seeps through and escapes.

Cigarettes in prime condition have a moisture content of about 10%. It will be seen by the Chart that cigarettes in the ordinary wrapped package lose more than half of their total moisture in thirty days and that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition

All is not moisture-proof Cellophane that glitters

DO NOT be misled by a mere shiny wrapper. The Camel Humidor Pack should never be confused with either the glassine or the ordinary Cellophane wrapping sometimes found on other cigarettes.

Our Humidor Pack is made of moisture-proof Cellophane, which costs nearly twice as much as ordinary Cellophane and is air-sealed at every point.

It is not put there merely to catch the eye but to perform a real service to the Camel smoker.

Because it is both air-sealed and moisture-proof, it keeps Camels always in mild, factory prime condition. It also guards the cigarettes within from contamination by dust or dangerous germs.

As you light a Camel fresh from the Humidor Pack, note how mild and cool and easy it is to your throat. Compare its fragrant mildness with the bite and burn that comes from the smoke of a stale or dried out cigarette.

Everywhere today people are talking about the new delight they have found in this blend of choicest Turkish and mellowest Domestic tobaccos.

Remember, Camels are the only cigarettes in the true Humidor Pack.

Margaret Hopes for a Love Match

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and asks him to help her get a job. She applies at the Lorrimer's and is claimed by the son of the house as his war bride, named "Delight." Mary Lou qualifies as companion for Travers, who seems to find her different from his remembrance of his "wife."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

MAY LOU nodded again. She could see Mrs. Lorrimer's point. With herself as an excuse Mrs. Lorrimer would try to win back her son to the give and take of young, happy society again. It would be the best thing that could ever happen to him.

After the bizarre but delectable pyjamas had been selected and the clever little negligee coats that went with them, Mrs. Lorrimer sent a tea tray to the saleswoman and her assistant, up in Mary Lou's sitting room, and ordered the car for the late afternoon train. Then she and Mary Lou went down to the library, Mary Lou wearing one of the new frocks, the sheer matching stockings and the completely satisfactory shoes, while the shop people repacked what little there was left, drank their tea and raved almost incoherently about Mrs. Lorrimer and her—was it niece?

"Ask Mr. Travers if he will join us," Mrs. Lorrimer told Peter, when tea was served in the great book-lined room which contrived to be bookly without gloom and comfortable and gay without distraction.

Quite Hungry

He would and did. Refreshed from sleep, amazed, a little ashamed of himself, and suddenly quite hungry, he arrived in the library and was offered tea and toast and ordered to admire Mary Lou's gown.

"She's so easy to fit," said his mother, "that it was like dressing a doll."

Lorrimer admired, sedate enough in words but his eyes spoke volumes. And Margaret Lorrimer suddenly felt a catch at her heart. If—if he fell in love with Mary Lou, transferred his affections? But of course he would not realize the transference. Still—he'd have to know some day. And then? And if Mary Lou—in her turn . . . ?

Problem Stuck

Travers' mother felt that it was a consummation devoutly to be hoped for. She had never met a girl she liked as well, trusted as deeply and found as companionable as Mary Lou Thurston. But, the real Delight? Where was she? And did she exist? And was she living somewhere, the wife perhaps of the man who sat here, watching Mary Lou's least gesture with an enchanted eagerness?

She put the question from her, the problems it aroused, and spoke hastily of anything, everything, to distract her troubled thoughts. But the problem was not to be set aside as easily as that.

Shortly before Christmas, Dr. Mathews, dropping in at tea hour, watched from the windows of the library the slight flurry of snow which came suddenly from an apparently cloudless sky, and departed again, leaving the horizon

Brookline Wife Charges Broker Punched Her

WINS A DIVORCE BY STORY OF ATTACKS

Mrs. J. H. Miller Avers Husband Also Kicked Her While Drunk

Testimony that John Harold Miller, Boston University graduate and a broker, struck and kicked his wife while under the influence of liquor won a divorce for Mrs. Madelyn C. Miller of 77 Marion st., Brookline in Suffolk Probate Court today.

Mrs. Miller, who was Madelyn C. Cutler before her marriage Oct. 12, 1928, was awarded custody of her daughter Ann, born June 15, 1930.

SAYS HE HIT HER

Taking the witness stand, Mrs. Miller testified her husband was drunk four or five times a week before her baby was born.

"He was so intoxicated at times," she said, "I had to put him to bed.

"In the summer of 1929 he hit me on the chin three or four times with his fist. That fall he came in very late and very intoxicated, woke me up, bit me, twisted my legs so I fell out of bed and in general was very rough.

"Once at a gathering at our home he was very attentive to a woman neighbor, and took her home. He didn't return that night."

DRUNK AT DANCE

Dr. Edward Francis Bowdoin of Bay State rd., testified treating Mrs. Miller.

Testimony that Miller, while under the influence of liquor, created a disturbance at Longwood Towers and struck his wife, who saved him from arrest, was given by Patrolman William H. Ward of the Brookline police.

Miss Barbara Cutler, a sister of Mrs. Miller, testified she saw Miller drunk at a dance, and that she and a young man assisted him home.

DRIVER STRICKEN AT WHEEL IN CRASH

Three in one was the toll in a crash on Anderson st., Beacon Hill, when a bakery truck, rolling wild, at high speed, crashed into two machines parked on the street when John Sullivan of Dorchester, driver of the truck, was seized by illness. Sullivan slipped from the wheel unconscious as it rolled down the hill and was taken to the hospital in a serious condition after the crash. The three tangled machines are shown here. (Staff photo.)

PHELAN 'FIRED' HIS OWN HELP, SAYS MADDEN

Jamaica Plain Representative Charges Committee Accomplished Practically Nothing

The Massachusetts Emergency Committee on Unemployment was accused of "stalling" today by Rep. William F. Madden of Jamaica Plain, member of the legislative committee on labour and industries, which yesterday questioned James J. Phelan, Boston banker, chairman of the emergency body.

"No committee can spend as little as $11,000 over a period of months in a situation like this and accomplish anything of value," said Madden. "As near as I can find out, about all the committee did was to engage in a lot of correspondence and stall along.

"Mr. Phelan says that through the efforts of the committee more than 50,000 persons were put to work. When he was asked where, he couldn't tell, and couldn't tell us if some of them were employed by the 'guy' concerns that appeared in cities like New Bedford, Lowell and Lawrence.

ACCUSES PHELAN

"A committee of this kind cannot create jobs where none exist. Its principal business was in trying to get some new industries to locate. Mr. Phelan couldn't tell of one new industry that came in as a result of the committee's work.

"As far as I can make out, the committee has done nothing to help the unemployment situation since its organization. When Mr. Phelan makes his personal report to the Legislature with records, I will have a few things to say on the floor of the House.

"Personally, I don't think that Mr. Phelan knows what it is all about. While advising others to keep wages up and urging that they continue their present forces, his own firm was dropping a large number of men."

MORE THAN NEEDED.

Phelan told the committee yesterday that his firm had been carrying about 2100 employes the past winter, 400 or 500 more than needed, and said that some banks had hundreds of employes they did not need.

Through the secretary of the unemployment committee, he stated today he considered the matter closed.

The legislative committee is working on a bill which would provide for an appropriation of $50,00 for unemployment surveys. The emergency committee goes out of existence April 15, at which time the State Department of Labor and Industries will take over its work.

MRS. SIMPSON — ROSE SIMPSON

JAKEY SELLER SAYS 'GUILTY'

Pleading guilty to conspiracy in connection with the sale of jamaica ginger which federal authorities alleged was drank as a beverage throughout the country, Henry Gross of Boston and Sharon was given two years' probation today in federal court.

As president of the Hub Products Co. of Boston, he pleaded guilty for the corporation to the same charge. The corporation was fined $1000.

Gross, who had previously pleaded not guilty, was given a sentence of two years in the House of Correction by Judge James A. Lowell but this was suspended provided he does not violate his probation.

The charge was conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and the pure food and drugs law.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Haven Parker told the court Gross and others were indicted in connection with the sale of jamaica ginger in various parts of the country, and in consequence of persons drinking this product thousands became paralyzed.

He said medical authorities had been consulted, but it had been impossible to ascertain whether or not these persons would recover. The maximum penalty under the law is two years.

WILD TRUCK IN TRIPLE CRASH

What might have been a serious accident was averted today when a heavy bakery truck, its driver unconscious, crashed into two parked cars in Anderson st., near Revere st., Beacon Hill, early today.

The driver, John J. Sullivan, 47 of 16 Sargent st., Dorchester, is believed to have suffered a cerebral hemorrhage just as he started his truck down the steep hill. He is married and is the father of seven children.

The truck, out of control, careened wildly into the parked cars, jamming all three against the wall of a house. Sullivan was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital in an unconscious condition.

WAAB New Call Letters for WLEX

When WLEX returns to the air within the next two weeks, after the removal of its transmitters from Lexington to Squantum, it will be known as station WAAB. This change in call letters was approved yesterday by the Department of Commerce at Washington. The Bay State Broadcasting Corporation, owners of the station applied for a change in call letters six months ago, and with the official approval, the phrase "The Voice of the Minute Man" will no longer be associated with the station.

$50 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event while it is happening. Bring your pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

CHURCH RECORD IS BROKEN

New all-time attendance records were set at the noonday Lenten services in Boston churches this year.

Unemployment is believed by Rev. George L. Paine, executive secretary of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, to have been a factor in sending these new numbers to church during the day.

At the Cathedral of St. Paul 31,700 attended, as compared with 27,600 for last year and 21,600 for 1929. Trinity Church reported its attendance had been half again as large as last year. A slight increase was noted at Park St. Church. The only decrease was in King's Chapel.

The current depression was also seen in contributions to the churches. It was reported that while churchgoers had been generous, their total contributions had not been as great as in the past.

MOTHER SUES SON IN $10,000

A "house divided," at least technically, was revealed today in Salem Court in a $10,000 suit of a Salem mother against her son.

Mrs. Marie J. Munnelly sues for "severe injuries, anguish of mind and expenses" growing out of an automobile accident last November.

Albert Munnelly, 23, former star athlete of Salem high school, makes his home with his mother.

According to the bill filed in the suit, Mrs. Munnelly was crossing Albion st. at Butler st., Salem, when a coach driven by her son skidded on the ice and knocked her down.

Rain on Way East to Arrive Tomorrow

While Boston and vicinity were bathed in spring sunshine today, a storm was making its way eastward from the Ohio valley, bringing rain for tomorrow afternoon and night.

Not much change in temperature is expected by the weather man, and Sunday will probably be fair.

The forecast: Fair tonight; Saturday partly cloudy, probably with showers in afternoon and evening, moderate south to west winds.

Revere A. L. Social

The first social event in the new American Legion Memorial Home, Broadway, Revere, will take place tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the form of a whist and bridge party. The affair is under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Revere Post 61, Mrs. L. C. Treworgy chairman.

BEATINGS WIN HER DIVORCE

A three-year quarrel over the "other woman" was cited in Middlesex probate court today by Mrs. Ethel Simpson of Somerville in her uncontested divorce suit against Frederick C Simpson.

Mrs. Simpson told Judge John C. Leggat her husband beat her repeatedly and on one occasion tried to strangle her.

She was granted a decree and custody of her daughter, Rose, 16, who testified for her mother.

Mrs. Mary Mucci, attractive divorced wife of Carmine Mucci filed a petition before Judge Leggat asking modification of her divorce decree, granted in 1930, to provide an increase in alimony.

She also asked the court to restrain her former husband from offensive conduct in his periodical visits to their home, Pasquale, 2.

During his calls, she said, Mucci threatened her and members of her family and used abusive language.

Mrs. Agnes S. Combs was divorced from Paul L. Combs on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. There was no contest.

Joseph F. Mullinsaux of Weymouth was granted a decree from Charlotte P. Mullinsaux, after he told the court of trapping his wife and a man in a Boston apartment. He was given custody of his two children.

POWER OF PRETTY WORDS CITED IN SALE OF TRUST STOCKS

LETTERS FROM SALESMAN ARE READ

Lawyers Argue at Hearing on Petition for Receiver of Two Companies

"Great is the power of pretty words," a congratulatory message sent Charles W. Seager by his brother with reference to advertisements of the Founders Securities Trust and the United Investment Assurance Trust stocks, was read into records of the master's hearing on a receivership petition today.

While attorneys argued over admissibility of letters of Seager to his brother, Albert, in Springfield and letters from Albert to Charles, a trustee in the companies, Charles, on the stand for the fourth day, worked out crossword puzzles in a newspaper.

In answer to a question, Charles Seager of Brookline, said his brother was a salesman for the companies. One letter from Charles to his brother, dated in January 1928, enclosed a $35 check, and said:

"Mr. Wilson will meet you. Look spick and presentable. Wear a stiff collar and talk as if you had all kinds of money."

"Stiff collars for high pressure methods."

Seager explained that Wilson was the one man who gave Albert instructions about selling stock of the trusts.

In another letter, dated Jan. 23 1928, the Brookline man called his brother's attention to advertisements of the company stocks in New York and Boston newspapers and trade journals.

Replying, Albert, according to another letter, declared the advertisements to be impressive, and added:

"The frequent question is: What is back of these shares? Great is the power of pretty words."

Tree Doctor Busy on Boston Common Tree—Benches Inhabited as Warmer Weather Arrives

DOCTOR AIDS TREE

Manicuring?—Patching? No—Dr. Herbert Cooper is doing an operation on a slightly diseased tree owned by the City of Boston and living for a long time on the Boston Common. The cameraman caught Dr. Cooper high up in the tree "cutting out" bad spots. The hole will be filled "A la Dentist" with cement that halts the decay of the tree. (Staff photo.)

Nice weather of yesterday filled the vacant benches on Boston Common That nice weather brought out the bench warmer. There will be a larger attendance from now on. (Staff photo.)

A GOOD SHOT!

What a shooter! He was willing to pose for the cameraman on Boston Common, where he had just won 64 "glassies." Let's meet Arthur Borstel.

COUPLE WED 50 YEARS TODAY

A 50-year-old couple sat today in their home in Glenoals st., Dorchester, and reviewed their half-century of married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick O. Orcutt, who were celebrating their golden wedding anniversary, have never spent a day apart in the 50 years since their wedding.

"Of course, I've worked all my life, and mother and I were necessarily separated during working hours," said Mr. Orcutt, who for 50 years has been a custom tailor in Boston.

"But this winter it seemed time to quit. Now that I don't go to business any more, we intend to spend the rest of our days in even closer companionship than in the first 50 years of our life together."

Mrs. Orcutt will be 80 years old in May, and her husband in June. They plan a combination party midway between their two birthdays.

Among the guests who entertained the couple with musical offerings was Mr. Orcutt's brother, Albert, a few years his junior, who was a member of the original "Old Homestead" quartet in Denman Thompson's stage success of the same name.

COST OF LIVING DROPS 17 P. C.

The cost of living in Massachusetts has dropped 17 per cent in the last year and many articles are being sold under the pre-war price level, Ralph W. Hobart, commissioner on the necessaries of life, announced today.

Coal, meat and shelter, he said, were the only items that have not approached the 1913 level, but rents are dropping and he expects a further decline in the fall.

"By shopping around," said Commissioner Hobart, "housewives will find many food articles selling considerably below the pre-war level.

"These include eggs, butter, lard, tea, rice, onions, canned peas, prunes and fresh pork loins. Others close to 1913 figures are bacon, coffee, sugar, flour, bread, potatoes and dried beans. Only the other day sugar sold for 6½ cents.

"Electricity is cheaper than it was in 1913, but the price of coal remains high, due to the rates fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

N. E. URGED TO GROW PULP

New England and New York were advised today to grow their own pulpwood rather than depend on foreign countries for future supplies.

Marinus Westveld of the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station of the Forest Service, said more consideration should be given to the possibilities of forcing spruce lands of the Northeast to produces the pulpwood required by that region.

Young growth, he said, must be established on the land before the mature trees are cut off. The present practice of clear-cutting makes this necessary. The need of some planting, slash burning and cutting of weed trees also is indicated in certain areas, he said.

Pulpwood production and manufacture has been important in the Northeast from the beginning of the industry in North America. Favorable climate and transportation facilities have made this region a good source of wood supply.

Melrose to Ask State for Armory

Melrose will ask the next session of the Legislature for an appropriation for a State armory. A petition to the Legislature is being prepared with the backing of the Melrose company of the National Guard, the city government and the Legion.

100 SAIL ON TRIP TO EUROPE

More than 100 passengers from Boston were aboard the North German Lloyd cabin liner Stuttgart when it sailed from Commonwealth Pier for Europe today, inaugurating the spring and summer schedule of the line from this port.

The liner, in charge of Capt. Adolph Winter, goes first to Galway and then to Queenstown, Cherbourg and Bremen.

One of the passengers was Mrs. Nathan Matthews of Beacon st., widow of former Mayor Matthews. She will go to Bremen and then to Munich, Bavaria, to visit her son, Armory, for three months.

Former Atty.-Gen. Henry A. Wyman sailed on his annual trip to Europe and with him were Dr. Henry L. Houghton, Harlet Houghton and Emelia Binninger, all of Boston.

Another passenger was Robert M. MacDonnell of Boston, brother of John O'Duffy MacDonnell, Boston newspaperman and dog fancier, for whom Robert MacDonnell will pick up a couple of Kerry Blue Terriers in Dublin.

Charles Brejska, Czecho-Slovakian consul at San Francisco, with Mrs. Brejska and their two daughters, Mia, eight, and Blanche, two, sailed for a vacation in Prague.

Curley Thanked by Legion Official of Ohio

Ware River Tunnel Contract Awarded

A contract for a tunnel between the Swift and Ware rivers, the last link in the Wachusett water system, has been let to the Wendal Hench Construction Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., it was learned today.

The Metropolitan District Water Commission awarded the contract on a low bid of $4,978,021.30, there having been 13 bidders in all. The tunnel is to be 20.4 miles long, connecting the Swift river with the Ware river, which is already hooked up with the Wachusett reservoir.

Culhane Found Dead

SLAIN BANDIT IS IDENTIFIED

An Ohio bandit who was bad in the big city of Chicago and was shot and killed in Detroit, was identified by Massachusetts authorities today in an odd pot-pourri of police work, although the bandit never had worked in this State.

Rosece C. Hill, Massachusetts fingerprint expert, made the identification after receiving a request that he make the attempt from James E. McCarthy, chief of detectives at Detroit.

The Detroit detective forwarded fingerprints of the dead holdup man to Hill, enclosing information that the bandit was shot and killed by police while attempting to hold up a store at 4450 Woodward ave., Detroit.

Within a comparatively few minutes, Hill had sent a telegram to Detective McCarthy, stating that the bandit was John Hein alias Jack Kilroy an Englishman with a record dating back to February 1911, and starting in Ohio.

Hill received the fingerprints and record from Chicago some years ago under the system of exchange between Massachusetts and Illinois.

Boy, 7, Proves He's One 'Big-Hearted Burglar' in Lynn

It's not so often you find such a generous burglar as Lynn's record-shattering housebreaker, who entered the home of Mrs. Theresa Chamberlain at 259 Chatham st. and stole $100 worth of jewelry, and a handbag.

He's a record-breaker, is this burglar, because he is only 7 years old.

A bit of detective work on the part of Patrolmen Asa Darsney and Thomas Grady finally traced down the culprit today and he admitted his error promptly.

"I gave a ring to Bobby," he said thoughtfully, "and a bracelet to Louie and another ring to Freddie, and the pocketbook to John. I didn't keep anything."

WOMAN BURNED IN KITCHEN

Dashing through the flaming kitchen, Mrs. Beula M. Dodge, 31, was severely burned today in escaping from her home at 418 Sea st., Adams Shore, Quincy, when an overheated stove started a blaze.

Mrs. Dodge was in a bedroom when she discovered the kitchen in flames. She suffered burns to the face, chest and hands as she fled to safety.

When You CAN'T QUIT

A headache is often the sign of fatigue. When temples throb it's time to rest. If you can't stop work, you can stop the pain. Bayer Aspirin will do it, every time. Take two or three tablets, a swallow of water, and carry-on—in comfort.

Don't work with nerves on edge or try all day to forget a nagging pain that aspirin could end in a jiffy! Genuine aspirin can't harm you; just be sure it's Bayer.

In every package of Bayer Aspirin are proven directions for headaches, colds, sore throat, neuralgia, neuritis, etc. Carry these tablets with you, and be prepared. To block a sudden cold on the street-car; quiet a grumbling tooth at the office; relieve a headache in the theatre; spare you a sleepless night when nerves are "jumping."

And no modern girl needs "time out" for the time of month! Bayer Aspirin is an absolute antidote for periodic pain.

Take Bayer Aspirin for any ache or pain, and take enough to end it. It can't depress the heart. That is why it is only sensible to insist on the genuine tablets that bear the Bayer cross. The pocket tin is a convenient size. The bottle of 100 tablets is most economical to buy.

RUSSELL NOBLE UNDERGOES FOURTH TEST BY ALIENISTS

DOCTORS PLAN AT LEAST ONE MORE VISIT

Youth Accused in the Hammer Slaying Yearns to Get Out Into Gardens

Lawrence, April 10—Dr. Clarence A. Bonner and Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, alienists engaged by the State to examine the mental status of Russell Noble, alleged hammer slayer of Mrs. Clara E. T. Ellis, paid their fourth visit to the Haverhill schoolboy's cell today.

Far from displaying apprehension at their appearance, young Noble greeted them cordially and seemed to welcome their visit as a break in the monotony of his jail routine.

Following a three hour session with the alienists, Noble emerged smiling from the infirmary where the examination took place and hurried to his dinner, which he ate with apparent relish.

Drs. Bonner and Briggs talked briefly with George Bunting, Russell's keeper, but they made no comment on their observations other than to say they would return for a fifth call, and possibly a sixth.

GAINS IN WEIGHT

As he waited his turn in the barber chair, the youth, to whom every spring but this one has meant a return to his tireless study of plant life, peered wistfully through the barred windows into the bright spring sunshine.

"Pretty tough to be inside on a day like this, isn't it?" he remarked.

After the "cleanup" he seemed reluctant to re-enter his cell, where he spends his days in constant poring over magazines and newspapers.

Although the strain of imprisonment is beginning to tell on him Russell continues to thrive on the prison fare. This morning in the guardroom he weighed 147 pounds, a gain of eight pounds in the seven weeks since he entered his cell.

BARNEY BROGAN IS DEAD AT 86

"Barney" Brogan has delivered his last lecture to a drunkard in the corridors of East Cambridge.

Bernard J. Brogan, once a member of the old Common Council of Cambridge, but for the last 34 years city missionary under the Sanders Temperance Fund, died today at his home, 8 Alden rd., Cambridge, in his 86th year.

He was a familiar figure about the courthouse in his capacity as city missionary, and he was paid $640 a year through a fund of $11,000 established some time ago, "for support of a missionary to promote the cause of temperance."

After a drunk was let out of court at East Cambridge it was "Barney" Brogan's duty to take him aside, lecture him on the evils of drink and attempt to have the imbibing one reform.

Despite his advanced years he kept on the trail of duty assiduously, but today was stricken with a hemorrhage and died.

He was a widower and is survived by one daughter, Miss Lillie Brogan, a superintendent for the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co.

3 YOUTHS HELD IN ROBBERY

Beverly, April 10—While they were arraigned here for drunkenness, two Brookline youths and another of West Newton were charged with breaking and entering today by Gloucester police.

Warrants were issued against the three, John Grantham, Toxteth st., and George Heyer, College rd., both Brookline, and Albert Boback, Waltham st., West Newton.

They were arrested last night near the home of Frank T. Demas of 75 West st. here.

Table linen, valued clothing in the roadster of Grantham were identified by William H. Smith, proprietor of the Gloucester Taverne, and the warrants followed in that city.

Two Women on New Melrose Park Board

Mayor Robert A. Perkins of Melrose today appointed the new members of the Melrose Park commission to succeed those who resigned as a protest against the cutting down of the city's appropriation for parks which would curtail its extensive playground and recreational work.

CHINESE WIFE ENDS HER LIFE

Mrs. Winnie Moy, 26, Chinese woman, committed suicide by hanging at her husband's apartment on Astor st., Back Bay, today. At the time, the husband Wong Moy, a government employe, on for a visit from Washington, was visiting the grave of his father at Mt. Hope cemetery.

No reason can be assigned for the act as Mrs. Moy was apparently happy, just having returned from a toy shop where she purchased toys for her three small children.

Mrs. May Moy, the girl's mother-in-law, became alarmed when she found the bath room door locked and could get no response. A neighbor was summoned who forced the door and Mrs. Moy's body was found hanging from a gas meter. Police of Station 16 took the woman to the City Hospital, but she was dead on arrival.

POLICE SHOT HALTS AUTO

Firing a shot through a rear tire, Patrolman Harold J. Griffin of Station 15, Charlestown, halted an automobile after a short chase on Alfred st., Sullivan sq., today.

Ray Murray of Lynbrook st., Roxbury, was later arraigned in Charlestown court for driving to endanger and failure to stop, and was released for a hearing April 16 after he pleaded not guilty.

A girl with him, who said she was Josephine Gibbons of East Canton st., South End, was fined $5 for drunkenness. Police said Murray had been ordered by Dr. Maurice Millen of Roxbury, owner of the car, to take it to a garage.

50 Routed by Fire in Back Bay House

Fire destroyed the apartment of Miss Josephine Chaplin at 73 Westland ave., last night, and drove out 50 other residents of the block.

BULLETS FOUND IN STOLEN AUTO

A box of cartridges for a .32 calibre automatic pistol, a large amount of food and a suitcase of clothing were found in a stolen automobile recovered today on North st., Newtonville, by Patrolman F. J. Regan.

The car according to police, was hired from the Cambridge branch of a Boston "drive-yourself" concern on April 6 and not returned. The number plates on it were stolen from W. J. Furbush, of Davis ave., Newton Center.

Somerville police were notified but the car did not answer the description of the one used by the slayers of James M. Riley, filling station manager.

FISH MEN PAID RACKETEERS

New York, April 10 (AP)—Henry I. Robbins, head of the Fish Employers Association labor committee of Fulton fish market, said on the witness stand today he collected money from market dealers and paid it to Ben Eatey, concerning whose whereabouts and activity he professed to know nothing.

Robins testified at the investigation into charges against Dist.-Atty. Thomas C. T. Crain. He was called to give evidence about alleged racketeering against fish dealers. Mr. Crain is accused of failing to stop the practice.

The witness was uncertain exactly how much he had paid Eatey, but estimated it was $12,000.

At another hearing into charges of municipal irregularities, Irving Klein, Queens superintendent of highways, against whom accusations of graft are being investigated by the Deputy Controller Frank J. Prial, walked out on the session.

He declared Mr. Prial was prejudiced and charged him with "besmirching the fair name of Queens" and of being in an alliance against James J. Walker, "the best mayor New York ever had had."

"SKIPPY," THANKS to Jackie Cooper and his playboys of the cross-lots and the city dumps, breathes the very breath of life into the throated screen. Here lives the spirit of that vastly popular comic strip of the same name which appears in the Boston Evening American; here upon the silver sheet at the Metropolitan is "Skippy" done to the life. And there is "Sooky," and there is the dog "Penny"; and there are all the rest of the characters whose appeal strikes down deep in the hearts of millions of readers.

PERCY CROSBY, who may be termed the pen-and-ink Pa and Ma of "Skippy" and his chums and foes, had a hand in the making, of the movie, and probably the faithful translation of the comics into a talkie is in great part to be accredited to him. The picture is that rare bird in films, a "natural," and is watched with excellence as to direction and photography. Jackie Cooper is a wonderful little actor, turning in perhaps the best of all child efforts as the central figure of "Skippy." He is far cleverer and more finished than the run of adult folk of Hollywood. He needs nothing. He handles himself like a little master, performs with remarkable restraint for a boy, drains his role of all its humor and its pathos, makes you laugh much and weep some, and seems to be started to a stardom that will eclipse all his juvenile predecessors. He's a keen chappie, and he uses his brain all the time. And that's unusual among his kind.

THERE IS a story of sufficient strength for a movie of this type. It links up "Skippy" and his pals with the fate of Shanty Town, and "Sooky's" mongrel "Penny." The motivation is cutely contrived, and Norman Taurog skilfully uses his cameras to portray the narrative, and cuts his scenes snappily with fine sense of speedy action. The dialogue is for the most part good; sometimes it is too drably commonplace. But the picture bristles with honest-to-goodness laughs, and is thoroughly enjoyable for young and old alike. It so happened that Hamelin town's Pied Piper had led all the happy children from the streets into the theater for the showing that we attended; and "it was a sincere delight to hear and observe this jubilant audience. We all had a dandy time, didn't we, kiddies? And when the tears came into your eyes at the dog-catcher's "dirty deed," they moistened mine, too. Honest, children, they did!

ORCHESTRA IN LAST CONCERT

The last concert of the People's Symphony Orchestra will be held next Sunday at 3:15 p. m. in Jordan Hall. Ellsworth Blanchard, tenor, will be the assisting artist, and Thompson Stone, conductor, has arranged a very interesting program. The first number will be Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique," one of the most favored among modern symphonies. "In Distant Land" from Wagner's opera Lohengrin will be sung by number and this will be sung by Ellsworth Blanchard

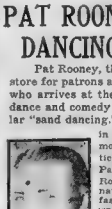
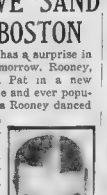
Helen Chandler and David Manners have leading roles in "Dracula," which today started its second week at RKO Keith's.

PAT ROONEY TO REVIVE 'SAND DANCING' AT KEITH-BOSTON

Pat Rooney, the same old inimitable Pat, has a surprise in store for patrons at the RKO Keith Boston, tomorrow. Rooney, who arrives at the RKO showhouse with son Pat in a new dance and comedy act, has revived his old time and ever popular "sand dancing." It's been 25 years since a Rooney danced in sand. And in those 25 years modern theater-goers have practically forgotten what it's like. Pat's father, the original Pat Rooney, was one of the originators of this kind of rhythmic dancing, soft shoe. "Sand dancing" isn't an intricate as it sounds. All it requires is a piece of linoleum and a cupfull of hard, fine sand. Pat sprays the sand on the linoleum and goes through one of the dance routines which have made him famous. His feet scrape along and scratch out beats which couldn't be obtained in any other fashion.



Pat Rooney



Pat Rooney, 3d

Twenty-five years ago Pat took a tip from his father and started sand dancing. Immediately the Keith-Boston in a brand new offering, Marion Bent, Pat's wife and the mother of young Pat, is the missing Miss Bent, a member of the Rooney "firm" for years, retired recently after an illness. The two Pats are on hand to carry out family tradition. They bring plenty of the favorite Rooney comedy along and of course no little of the Rooney dancing.

New Contract

RKO Pathe has signed Robert Armstrong to a new long term contract. In addition Armstrong has a two months' leave of absence which he is spending in Europe.

"Women Love Once"

Edward Goodman, 17 years a playwright, stage director and stage producer, has been assigned to direct Ruth Chatterton's new picture, "Women Love Once," from Zee Akins' stage success, "Daddy's Gone A-Hunting."

Ed Wynn Tops Stars for Cushman Club Benefit

Ed Wynn, star of "Simple Simon" at the Shubert, is expected to be master of ceremonies for the fourth annual benefit performance of the Charlotte Cushman club to be held at the Colonial theater, Friday afternoon, April 17. An all-star program will be presented, with stars of the current musical comedies and plays putting on specialty acts

MAUDE ADAMS LIKELY TO MAKE TWO PICTURES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, April 10—Jack Bachmann is no piker when it comes to formulating production plans. You never in the world could guess who may make two pictures for him. Now hold your breath. Maude Adams has practically agreed to appear in "Kim," Kipling's famous story, and one other to be selected by herself.

This is the way it happened, in case you are skeptical. About 10 years ago, when Bachmann was with Famous-Players, contracts were all but signed with Miss Adams when something happened. She has always liked Mr. Bachmann and it was very easy for him to approach her with a production proposition. She owns the complete screen rights to Kipling's famous story and has Louella O. Parsons always been interested in bringing it to the screen. At one time she had a color process she was planning to introduce with "Kim" as her subject

Mary Roberts Rinehart

Of course, Miss Adams' picture will be released through one of the big companies. Every producer of any importance has at one time or another tried to coax her to make a picture.

IF YOU WANT to hear some genuine enthusiasm ask Marie Dressler how she likes the story "Emma," written for her by Frances Marion.

"The best story I ever had," says Marie. "What lines! What dialogue! They can talk all they want about imported authors but there is no one who can write for me the way Frances does."

Marie came back from Santa Barbara and what a welcome she got on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. But alas, her sick partner, Polly Moran, with two back eyes, a broken nose and other injuries, was unable to play in "Politics." There was some talk of getting someone else to take Polly's place, but Marie with her usual sweetness said

"Oh, let's wait for Polly. It would make her too unhappy."

HEARING THAT Radio Pictures had purchased "Rich Men's Wives," by Agnes Christine Johnston, makes us wonder when Azzie and husband, Frank Dazey, are coming back home. Azzie who has solved the problem of being a successful mother and having a successful career at the same time, bundled her three youngsters up one fine day and took them all to New York. She felt she was not getting along as well as she might in Hollywood so into the East they went. She had a play produced; he has written several articles for magazines and Agnes has continued her work. "Rich Men's Wives" is now being considered for Mary Astor

THERE IS AN interesting addition to the Paramount studios, a quiet, talented young man who has just been assigned to the editorial department. His name is Allen Rinehart. Yes, you're right, he is the son of the famous

SALLY O'NEIL looks as well as she ever looked in her life. She has taken off at least 10 pounds and she is as slim as she was when she first started in the movies. Sally will tell you it pays to reduce for she has now been given an interesting part in "Street Scene," which will be made at United Artists

I WAS WATCHING Charles Gibbon-formice director, on Marion Davies set. He is a very good actor, too. Years ago Gibbon Richard Bennett and Robert Leonard were all in a stock company together. Richard Bennett was the star, Gibbon was the heavy and Robert Leonard was the juvenile. Bennett, who is very much strung, stopped in the middle of his performance one night and said "When those two young men in the wings stop talking about motion pictures, the show will go on." Those two young men were Bob Leonard and Charles Gibbon. The other day Bob was directing Marion Davies in a scene and Bennett, who plays Marion's father, and Gibbon were rehearsing. Bob stopped and said, "When those two young men stop talking about the stage the picture will go on."

BARITONE TO SCHUMANN IS SING HERE

Grand opera and concerts have in recent seasons divided the activities of John Charles Thomas, the American baritone whom Boston knows only as a concert singer. Thomas is to give a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, April 12

Numbers for his Boston recital which will be his only appearance of the season here, include: Schubert's "An die Leier"; Wolf's "Heimweh"; Strauss' "Ruhe, meine Seele"; Brahms' "Standchen" and "O Liebliche Wangen"; Faure's "Soir" and "Fleur Jetee". Moussorgsky's "Priere du Soir" and "Chanson de la Puce".

FEATURED

The music of Robert Schumann will furnish the program for the 224 pair of concerts to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall. These next Boston concerts will therefore take place on April 17 and 18.

The distinguished soloist will be Gregor Piatigorsky, the Russian 'cellist who will then be heard for the first time in Boston. Schumann's violincello concerto will be his introductory score.

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will open the program with this composer's overture to Byron's "Manfred," and close it with the First Symphony in B-flat

Says Genevieve the kitchen cynic: "The only way I know of to quit worrying is to quit trying to make it unnecessary."

Lawyers are protesting because Nevada wants to fix the maximum fee in an uncontested divorce case at $35.

It might be worse—what if they limited a client to thirty-five divorces?

Of course, if the divorce racket goes bad for lawyers, they can always fall back upon the current paradox of filing suits against Rudy Vallee.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Synthetic Aunt Bella:

My husband likes to talk about himself. Last week he dislocated his jaw. Do you think I should call a physician?

MRS. McGILLICUDDY.

Ans.—Well, you might think it over, and later on in the summer consult your family physician. Personally I always like to wait until I'm sure I'm right, and then make haste slowly.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

THE LAST CALL

Love Leads to Death

McCUTCHEON LOOKED at the twisted bits of metal, the flame-seared ends of wood and shreds of cloth, the jun', that had been a 200-mile-an-hour job with the rising of that same sun which now put oddly red setting gleams across the wreckage.

The doctor called him and he went to one of the field cots there beside the ambulance, the cot upon which the woman lay. The sheet, pulled up over the other cot, told mutely that the man was dead. I saw him bend over the slender figure, listening intently. I saw the figure settle back and saw Mac, after one look at the doctor, turn away. He motioned to me to follow and we climbed into his car, parked at the drab roadway circling the field. He shifted gears and made the roadway just as the ambulance clanged by. He turned to me, searching with his eyes.

"I'm not an inspector for the department now. Until we get back to town I'm just a man, a friend of yours, and I've got to talk. I'm just talking to myself. You knew Pat Sexton, and you knew Chubby Krueger. That's why I'm talking to myself out loud, just as Buzz McCutcheon and I'll deny I ever knew you if you tell a soul."

"Pat and I were bunkies together back in 1918, when we were at Kelly Field. We got to be almost like brothers. Then Ann Harkness bobbed up. You didn't know her, but Pat and I had, and so had Chubby Krueger when we spent our summers up at Tolson's Lake and Chubby came up from school to his father's resort hotel.

"Ann had stuck with the signal corps and was hell bent for France as a hello girl. Somehow or another she'd heard about how Chubby had gone back to serve his father's country, when the war broke out, before we ever got into the picture. And the three of us sensed the rivalry that had been more or less unexpressed up at the lake between Chubby and Pat over Ann.

"After which I went on to Squadron A. Pat and I sort of stuck closer than ever and when he and Ann were married just before we left for France I was best man at the wedding. Over there he showed me letters from her that told how proud she had been when he got his silver bar and later on when he won his captain's double.

"And it wasn't more than a week after that when Pat went up with Malcolmson for sunset patrol. We saw what happened when they came streaking for the hangars. Eight Albatross single-seaters swooped down out of the sun and opened up with all their guns. They got Malcolmson in the first burst of fire. Pat side-slipped and got off to one side, to engage in a dog fight with one of the enemy planes that seemed to be on the edge of things.

"The others didn't play the game the way we'd always seen it played. They didn't bust and let the two dual it out. Not for a little bit. They came on, led by the commander, and let Pat have it from the rear, just as he'd swung in on the tail of the man in the single-ship.

"On top of that, as Pat came swirling down in a mass of smoke and flame the leader of the eight-ship flight leaned out and laughed at his falling plane. We saw his gesture of derision through our glasses.

"If I live to be a hundred, I'll never forget—the day I stood there while a squad fired it final volley, while a bugler blew 'Taps,' and they put Pat Sexton under the sod there near Montfaucon. I don't know how Ann got away, but she was there.

"'Buzz,'" she said, "it wasn't as though they'd killed him in fair fight. Eight of them and they took from me the one thing in life that I loved—the only thing I ever did or could love. You were his friend, 'Buzz,' his pal. You know he didn't get a chance. And then they insulted him, in death. You've got to find out who it was that has done this to me.

"Well," he continued, after a moment, "it was Ann that I talked to there on the field.

"And"—there was a pause while he struck a match—"the man who came down with her in the ship was Chubby Krueger."

"She told me," Mac continued, in a peculiarly flat monotone, almost metallic in its sameness, "that she'd slipped the control pin from Krueger's cockpit before they took off for what was to be her practice flight. And, too, she was to make a parachute jump down. She'd made the said, to leave him in a ship without controls, to trap him without a chance, and level off a distance overdue to that man she loved.

"She told me that, as she fought for altitude, it seemed as though Pat were there beside her. She told me Pat told her she couldn't be a crook to cheat just because some one else had been. She told me that, up there behind the clouds, Pat told her to come to him—and she nosed that plane straight down toward her ground.

"Gee," Mac mused dreamily, "a love like that, keeping a woman true to a man through the years, and taking her to him through the Valley of the Shadow—what a woman."

Mac's report, as I saw it later on in a department pamphlet, stated briefly that the "accident" which sent Mrs. Ann Sexton to death had been due to "frozen controls" and to have been unavoidable.

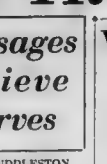
Massages Relieve Nerves

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

TOO MUCH mental or physical pressure causes circulation to stall, burning up the nerves. When circulation is thus impeded, the same sort of congestion occurs within the tissues as happens when a motor stalls in traffic. Therefore, when we become irritated, run-down or places ourselves under terrific mental or physical pressure for any length of time, a situation similar to a traffic tieup occurs within the network of nerves which run through the body.



Josephine Huddleston

Before facials can be successful, this tieup of nerves must be straightened out and local circulation once again surges through the arteries in the swift current essential to health and vitality.

Just below the ears the great occipital nerve, which controls the back of the head, is found. Place the pads of your finger tips just behind the lobes of the ears and press firmly. Do you find a slight sensitiveness resulting from this pressure? If so, it means that the nerves there need gentle massage to arouse circulation sufficiently to iron out the minute knots in the nerves of that area. But to send the blood coursing through that area the massage begins at the point where the shoulders join the throat.

Just press the pads of the fingers firmly against the flesh at that point and hold the pressure for a second. Relax the pressure and slip the fingers up along the throat. Press again—hold—relax and then run the fingers up a little further. Continue the press-hold-relax movement until the fingers reach the hard bone structure just back of the ears. Instead of continuing the massage movement to the front of the ears, from that point work back of them, following the contour of the ears to their tips.

You should note a stimulating reaction almost immediately and one that is definitely recognized by the tingling, warm sensation which pervades this area treated.

What's in Fashion in Suits

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, April 10—Of all the many practical costumes of spring (and spring costumes are certainly practical, as every fashion-knowing woman is aware) here's one that rates ace-high for usefulness and economy.

It's the lightweight wool coat with its own silk dress—an ensemble, if you like to call it that.

The coats of these ensembles aren't as heavy as a separate coat would be. They tools are a little lighter. Sometimes they're lined and sometimes they aren't.

And all that makes them fine coats for later summer wear when it's too warm for a regulation weight spring coat.

The coats of these ensembles are usually quite simple in line. They're most apt to be collarless or to have very small collars. They're generally three-quarter length sleeves (and this gives a chance for enough bits of bright colored or printed dress sleeves hang low).

They're also most practical when they wrap well over to the side, of course. But some of them are made with straight lines, fastening straight in the middle below the waistline with two or three buttons and the opening in a V-shape below

Dresses Are Bright

The dresses that go with these coats are usually of a gay print or some bright, spring-like color. They have long or short sleeves; but when the coat has three-quarter length sleeves, then the dress is usually long-sleeved.

So with such costume, you have really three costumes—or the foundation of three, at least. (1) Coat and dress worn together. (2) Coat worn with other dresses. (3) Dress worn with other coats.

The illustrations show you two fashionable variations of this ensemble idea. At the right is a collarless coat with three-quarter sleeves that fastens with the interesting diagonal line treatment you're seeing so often on suits and other coats.

Printed Silk Dresses

The dress is of printed silk with a long sleeve cut modified leg o' mutton type. Notice when the coat is on, the scarf of the dress is allowed to flit outside. It could be tucked inside. But it's smarter looking don't you agree? worn as it's sketched.

The other costume shows a coat with the narrow roll collar and surplice line closing that fashion-knowing women are finding so becoming. And this coat has full-length sleeves

The dress that goes with it has long sleeves, too, though it could have had short sleeves. And instead of a scarf, as the other dress has, the bright color of the bow) neckline shows above the surplice line of the dark coat.

The coats look like any fashionable spring coats, don't they? And the dresses like any fashionable dresses. So there's no question but what you can wear either part of an ensemble with other separate items of the spring wardrobe

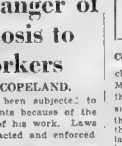
The Danger of Silicosis to Workers

By DR. COPELAND.

MAN HAS been subjected to various ailments because of the very nature of his work. Laws have been enacted and enforced to prevent unnecessary exposure to disease.



Dr. Copeland

Silicosis is a disease of the lungs. It is produced by breathing in great quantities of dust containing a high percentage of silica. The disease is common in the mines of South Africa and Australia. It has been reported in the United States and Canada.

It is found in men who work on siliceous rock or dust. In metal mining and coal mining. It is encountered in the quarrying of sandstone and granite, in tunneling, excavating, and sand blasting, stone carving, grinding and polishing.

Just how silica acts on the lung tissues is not definitely understood. As a rule it produces a chronic bronchitis and this may lead to one of the forms of pneumonia.

The afflicted person becomes extremely susceptible to infections of the lungs. Repeated attacks of pneumonia lead to a general lowered resistance and, following this, tuberculosis may be contracted.

Much has been done to reduce the prevalence of this disease. Proper ventilation of mines has greatly diminished it. Men are now protected by the wearing of masks similar to those worn by our soldiers during the war.

Long exposure to exposure to the dust is to be condemned. It is recommended that in these dusty industries the men work in short shifts. At certain periods they should change their work, doing tasks whereby exposure to dust is not required.

clear, cold, blue; watched, too, Mary Lou and Lorrimer ride up the driveway, watched them from sight, heard them dismount at the main entrance, listened to the faint echo of voices and laughter and the clatter of hooves on the frosty drive, and turned to Mrs. Lorrimer, who was watching him.

"He's better, isn't he?" asked

"Astonishingly so. They ride every day. She's managed to get him up early and to bed early, by, merely, example. He's going to teach her to play squash. Yes, he's much better. Sleeps well, and his appetite has improved enormously. He still has threes—well, spells of brooding. He's quiet then, abstracted, living over things. She pulls him out somehow. They read together, French, English, and a little German. Neither of them is an accomplished German student. I think she started that to try and get him to a more rational memory of—war, prison, all the rest. She told me that if he could read of the new Germany in the original language she thought it would help. So she and Carol are running and dictionaries and they have started. It's been interesting to watch them. And she's reconciled him to Jenny and her crowd. They come over now and then."

"What have you told Jenny?" asked the doctor.

"Just that Delight is a girl Travers knew during the war and that I've asked her to live with us, as my companion, as she is now alone in the world."

"She believes you"

"Yes. Suspects a romance, but says nothing about it. Jenny is hard boiled—or so she thinks—but she is discreet."

"And it," Mathews asked slowly, "Jenny should be right, and out of this experiment of ours romance should come—what then?"

"Oh," Margaret made a little —I'd wish it, of course, For my own sake as well as for Travers'. But—until we know for certain—"

Mathews started to answer, but at that moment Travers and Mary Lou came in, booted and spurred, with a hint of winter winds about them, Lorrimer's sallow face glowing and Mary Lou's like nothing so much as a rose "We're starved, aren't we, Lorry? I shpo there's lots of tea! No, I'd rather have milk, if Peter doesn't mind." said Mary Lou changing her mind, and so would you, Lorry. You need to get some fat on that rack of bones," she assured him. "Doctor Mathews, I don't suppose you approve of stuffing between meals?"

"I seem to be making an impression on this plate of toast," the doctor told her. They were very old friends by now. "And in your case, Delight, I certainly do approve, for you use up enough energy for six girls in 24 hours, and this household is so fashionable it dines late. But what about your figure?"

"What about it?" asked Mary Lou, laughing, "I stay the same weight, year round, almost. Remember I'm riding every day —and Lorry is going to let me jump next spring. And I've my daily doses. And as for more besides. And so, I'm hungry most of the time," she confessed. There was a scratch at the library door, and an inquiring whine.

"Oh, please, may he come in?" Mary Lou begged. "He's been awfully good about waiting outside!"

She Can't Forget Him

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

For the past four months I have been going with a boy who seemed quite interested in me. However, from the beginning we had an understanding that we were not going steady. Just lately we broke up and now he's going with a girl exactly my opposite. I used to think when we broke up, he would be just another boy in my life, but I find that isn't so. I can't forget him. What am I going to do?

I know you will say "Go out with someone else and forget him," but that's easier said than done. I have tried. L. R

Dear L. R.—I am sorry that the unfailing remedy of going about with someone else hasn't been successful in your case. There are only two other alternatives I know of. Give time a chance; interest yourself deeply in some work or occupation that will help you to forget the young man who has probably by this time of his life with the other girl. Summon your pride, your common sense, and throw some precious youth being unhappy over someone who has forgotten you."

Spoiled and Doesn't Like Housework

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am 23 years of age and have been keeping company with a lady two years younger. My problem is that I do not know when, if ever, I will earn enough to support her. She is spoiled, is used to spending money extravagantly, and is very independent. She can do, but does not like to do, housework. We both care for each other very much and have both our families' O. K. What can you advise?

ANXIOUSLY WAITING.

Dear Waiting—It would be a great mistake for a boy of 23 to marry a girl of 21 who is spoiled and who doesn't like housework.

Address Both Bride and Groom

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Kindly steer me right on this difficulty of mine:

A friend of mine is to be married at his fiancee's home in another part of the country. We are very close friends. In fact, we still correspond and will continue to do so. What I want to know is this: I want to send him a gift now on his wedding day. I would like to send the wire to the hotel where they intend to stay. Should I address it to Mr. and Mrs. or just to Mr.? I do not know the girl at all, and we know nothing about each other. Would it be absolutely wrong to address the wire to him alone?

R.

Don't, please, send your telegram of congratulations to the hotel where they are to stay, and don't, please, address your wire only to Mr. Both of these details would be thoroughly incorrect, and the new wife would have very social right to "wonder" about your manners and your point of view.

Salads As Spring Tonic

By MARTHA LEE.

MUCH MORE palatable than Grandmother's sulphur and molasses is an extra helping of a spring salad to announce a spring tonic.

These can range all the way from substantial main dish salads such as chicken or lobster to light crisp mixtures of fresh green vegetables and fruits, plus, needless to say, the inevitable lettuce.

Be sure the lettuce is absolutely crisp. As soon as the lettuce arrives from the store the leaves should be separated, washed carefully, shaken (the French dry each leaf with a clean towel), put in a covered container such as a lard pail, if you have an electric refrigerator, or wrapped in damp cheesecloth in the ordinary kitchenet. Then the salad-making time the lettuce will be crackling crisp.

I've just received another supply of the famous "Book of Salads," which includes a wonderful variety of delicious dressings, as well as green salads, vegetable salads, fruit salads, meat and fish salads, molded salads, miscellaneous salads, such as lettuce rolls, sardine surprise, a collection of delicious sauces for meat, fish and some especially delicious sandwich suggestions, not to forget a chat on garnishes and what to serve with salads. I'll gladly send you your copy of this book if you will in turn send me three loose 2 cent stamps to defray postage.

LUNCHEON SALAD.

1 cake cream cheese,
½ cup mayonnaise dressing.
1 green pepper, chopped.
1 tbsp. plain gelatine.
½ cup celery, chopped.
¼ cup stuffed Spanish olives, sliced.

Soak gelatine in ¼ cupful cold water. Heat soup to boiling point, add gelatine and cream cheese. When slightly thickened, add celery, stuffed olives, green pepper and mayonnaise dressing. Mold in individual molds, chill, serve in nest of lettuce, garnishing with spoonful of mayonnaise dressing and stuffed olives, sliced. Serve for luncheon or supper with whole wheat bread and butter sandwiches, small cakes or other dessert and tea.

Answers to Requests

FOR MRS. R. A. V. of Arlington—Here is the requested recipe for soft frosting that will not harden.

Put 1 cup of light brown sugar in double boiler. Add ½ cup of water and 1 unbeaten egg white; take spoon and mix together. When it is heated through take egg beater and beat while cooking, steady for seven minutes. This makes a delicious, soft, creamy frosting. After removing from fire let cool a little and add 1 tsp. of vanilla or almond, whichever preferred.

FOR MRS. A. C., of Everett: GRAPENUTS CUSTARD PUDDING

1 egg, beaten
2 yolks, beaten
2-3 cup sugar
2-3 cup grapenuts
Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon
1 qt. milk, scalded
1 tbsp. butter
2 tbsps. sugar
2 egg whites

Combine whole egg yolks, sugar and rind and pour milk over all and stir well. Add butter and grapenuts. Pour into a greased baking dish, placed in a pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees, F., until a knife comes out clean. When pudding is done pour lemon juice over it and cover with meringue made by folding into egg whites. Bake for 15 minutes more or until brown. This is delicious. It is a prize recipe. MRS. INA POTTER.

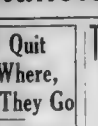
Plants Quit City; Where, Why They Go

New York's Indifference Is Opportunity for Other Sections

—By B. C. Forbes—

New York, April 10—Most communities are interested in attracting industries. Some of them conduct very intelligent advertising campaigns to make known their facilities and advantages. They know that the establishment of new industries brings new wealth, increased employment, more trade, more property on which to spread taxation.

New York City is losing industries by the hundred, yet no body of individual, no chamber of commerce or merchants' association of trade is interested even to keep tabs on what is happening. Apparently new enterprises are so new so lackadaisical so indifferent that nobody cares.



B. C. Forbes

I have tried every likely source of information, but no up-to-date data can be found—scarcely a reflection on the city, its municipal authorities and its trade organizations.

* * *

Why the exodus from New York City and State?

Where do departing concerns go?

The main reasons mentioned by migrating enterprisers are:

1. Unsatisfactory labor conditions, including arbitrary union.

2. Higher wage scales here than in other points.

3. Heavy taxation on profits in New York State.

4. Workingmen's compensation burdens.

5. Lower power rates and more bountiful labor in the South.

"Which sections gain what New York loses?

So far as can be ascertained from data not nearly as up-to-date as it should be, almost two-thirds of the departing concerns went to some other part of the Middle Atlantic States. One-fifth of them chose New England. There was a considerable exodus of leather goods manufacturers to Pennsylvania, to secure lower labor and space costs. Many textile and knitting woman's clothing firms making moved to other centers, large or small, within 150 miles of the metropolis. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania received a considerable number of millinery and lace goods firms, while many shirt manufacturers moved from the city to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

The president of a Syracuse knitting company made this explanation:

"I am moving my plant South because of competitive conditions. We are no longer able to produce our goods profitably in New York State. Our decision was based primarily on the uncertainty that surrounds our state production costs in New York State—wages, hours of labor, insurance premiums and transportation. We are tired of trying to do business on the edge of a volcano that may wipe us out any moment. . . . We have some valuable assurance in the South that we are not to be legislated into bankruptcy."

Mark A. Daly, who has gone into the subject, states:

"It is a fact that no industrial concern manufacturing goods in New York State has any thought of making any capital expenditures whatever in extending or increasing the capacity of their plants in New York State. If any such expenditures are made they will be made in the South."

I am told that "almost the last manufacturer of men's hats left in New York City is preparing to leave, mainly because of wage and trade union handicaps

TOBACCO PRICE BOOST HELP TO SHARES

By FRANK H. MELOON.

That tobacco price boost proved a help in shares in the lively session today. Certain advices uniformly referred to the raises as "projected" or "prospective," but Boston tobacco buyers found the price advanced today in some of the chains. The trading favorite Liggett & Myers Tobacco "B" stepped up over 3½ a share in its own wild unlisted fireworks and others moved higher.

Radio Corp. of America, most heavily traded issue in the world this week, as well as in many other markets, at reported currently advancing its preferred dividend. The preferred is selling on a basis to yield better than 10 per cent, which is not indicative of dividend security. The popular chairman of Radio Corp., Gen. John G. Harbord, was in Boston this week. Because his visit was on a Sunday, and was in payment of tribute to his friend the late Gen. Edwards, business was not discussed

As a matter of fact, no comparison of Radio Corp's. earning could have been made with the first 1930 quarter. The 1930 quarter was in the red, but how red no figures have been issued to show. There was distress inventory to be disposed of then. Radio Corp's. sales of radios in the first 1931 quarter are said to have disappointed the management. They may be less than with the proverbial grain of salt, since the first quarter, following the Christmas season, is usually the record marks in favorite gift lines.

Frequent murders and holdups in filling stations and elsewhere are regarded as the natural result of preventing by clumsy lawmaking the proper distribution of firearms. Distress of two big New England firearms firms is laid in South to the law which prevents property owners and householders from buying arms for their own defense. In the South, we are told, filling station keepers are generally well armed, and cowardly thugs seldom take chances.

Bar silver, now watched closely as a stock market factor likely to be significant for the long pull, has held recent gains nicely. Today it was steady and unchanged at 28¼d an ounce. There was a fair demand for the metal with offerings limited.

Utah Is in Red After Dividends

Utah Copper was quiet today. Most of the capital stock is held by Kennecott, which held steady most of the session. Utah today reported profits of $4,889,381 for 1930, against $38,660,379 in 1929. Charges for inventory and depletion totaling $5,132,161, were made directly against surplus last year. Deficit in 1930 after dividends of slightly more than $18,000,000 was $7,350,518, contrasting with a surplus of $1,170,579 in the previous year.

Natural Gas Has Lowered Profits

Natural gas industry, to which attention was first called on a big scale from Wellsburg several months ago, has not yet "got going" on the basis to give its securities remain hopeful. Lowered profits for the past year show along the line, but a single year does not complete the story.

American Natural Meets Obstacle

American Natural Gas Corp. had net income of $606,478 in 1930, equivalent to 19 cents a common share, against $565,339, or 74 cents, in 1929. The company said it did not expect to be ready to pay dividends on its securities until Oklahoma Natural Gas Corp., its principal subsidiary, had resumed dividend payments.

"Unforeseen" Holds Oklahoma Gas Back

Oklahoma has temporarily discontinued disbursements of its preferred stock because of "recent unforseen developments." American Natural Gas has been paying $1.50 quarterly on its own $7 preferred issue.

Report Sales Increase for Reynolds Tobacco

Renewed Activity Noted in Briggs

Renewed activity in Briggs is traced to the opportunity of profiting with constructive operations in the stock. At the same time, buying also is inspired by the flash sent out by prominent brokerage firm that it is expected to bring out an eight-cylinder car to sell under $1000 some time in June and that Briggs will get the body business.

Incidentally, earnings of the company have been holding up well.

Goodyear Dividend Safe, Says Leader

Commenting on action of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. directors in reducing common dividend to a $3 annual basis from $5, Pres. F. W. Litchfield says he sees no reason why the current annual rate should not be continued.

Company's plants are operating at about 66 2-3 per cent of capacity, about unchanged compared with a year ago. Mr. Litchfield anticipates no material improvement in business until 1932.

Standard Statistics' Steel View Is Dark

Slow consumptive demand and unremunerative prices indicate that earnings in the steel industry the next few months will remain unsatisfactory, says an analysis issued today by Standard Statistics Company.

SHORTS COVER IN LATE WALL ST. TRADING

New York, April 10 With the market sold to an apparent stand still some of the bears hurried to take profits in advance of the week-end late today for the New York Stock Exchange

The market worked gradually lower during the earlier hours trading with the rails again dragging the list down but trading dwindled off close to the lightest volume seen this year

LOSSES ARE CANCELLED

Short covering in the last hour cancelled most of the early losses of 1 to 8 points, and net gains of a point or two were scored in many

Fresh weakness cropped out in Westinghouse Electric and Pathe, Bethlehem Steel in the final dealings however, giving the list an irregular tone at the finish. Transactions were only about 1,600,000 shares.

U. S. Steel closed up a fraction after a temporary advance of more than a point in response to its unfilled tonnage figures. Bethlehem however, lost nearly 2

Westinghouse Electric dropped more than 2 points in the last hour and a half years, reflecting an unofficial estimate of a $2,000,000 deficit for the last quarter

In the rails New York Central closed nearly 2 points higher after dipping below its December minimum Illinois Central, Norfolk & Western and Southern Pacific gained about as much. Lower Pacific finished proof of an extreme loss of 4.

TOBACCOS ARE STEADY

Tobaccos were steady. American & Tobacco B closing about 1 higher Auburn gained 7 and Nash 1½ no Gains at first from several to 2 and slightly outnumbering losses which were 242 issues selling unchanged

Bunched list

The steel tonnage figure, showing the small increase of 30,136 tons for March, provided no surprise. Wall Street observers had generally agreed that there would be no significant change. A larger increase would have indicated that the price increase for bars, shapes and plates announced for April 1 had been successful in checking the hurried buying at the lower levels.

The tobacco issues were coincident with the taxing effect of the previously announced increase of two cents a package in cigarette prices by two leading tobacco stocks can be, apparently and a price cutting war. Wholesale prices, however, are unchanged so manufacturers will not benefit for the present, at least

That Nash directors saw fit to declare a quarterly dividend of $1 despite the fact that the December-January-March earnings were only about 40 cents a share was regarded as a hopeful sign. President Nash issued an optimistic statement.

FRIGIDAIRE HAS SALES RECORD

Pres. Boeckler of Frigidaire Corp., subsidiary of General Motors Corp., declared the greatest increase had been achieved in household division which sold 75 per cent more Frigidaires than during March a year ago, and 120 per cent more than in February of this year.

A substantial increase was noted in total sales in New York district, which includes commercial, ice cream cabinet and water cooler divisions.

Recent order from Empire State Building, specifying exclusively Frigidaire water coolers, swelled the March volume if the latter division considerably, he added.

The suites of the new Waldorf-Astoria also will be equipped with new porcelain-enamel refrigerators.

The Frigidaire Corp. will spend approximately $7,000,000 in 1931 in newspaper, magazine, billboard and direct mail advertising.

Corn Futures Set New Season's Lows

Chicago, April 10—Stop-loss selling broke out late today, and carried all deliveries of corn below previous bottom-price records this season. A rally followed. Wheat closed unchanged to the highest; corn ¼ to ⅝ up, and oats steady to ¼ better. Rye was steady to ⅛ higher

Earnings Increase on Century Shares

Century Shares Trust, sponsored by Brown Bros Harriman & Co., reports for the three months to March 31 net income from dividends and interest of $41,853, equal to 25 cents a share on outstanding shares, against net income from dividends and interest in like 1930 period ow $37,366

Indiana Standard Reduces Prices

Standard Oil Co. of Indiana effective Saturday, will reduce service station price of gasoline 2 cents a gallon, bringing the price in Chicago territory down to 14 cents a gallon regular and 17 cents a gallon on ethyl. Tank-wagon price remains unchanged

Cotton Is Mixed in New York Dealings

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Chapter III—"ALONG MARATHON TRAIL"

TEN YEARS have rolled by. Ten years since the Olympic Games at Athens in 1896 and the great Marathon victory of S. Louee we told you about in yesterday's column. It is 1906, now. Another Olymnic meet and another Marathon In the track events, except the Marathon, America cleaned up as usual. But Boston boys did not play as important a part as they did in the first Olympic meet in '96. The Hub had two representatives, Billy Eaton, the sprinter, and Bob Fowler of the Cambridgeport Gym, the Marathoner. Dame Fortune refused to smile on either of the Bay State boys. Everyone can't win. Somebody, no matter how fleet, how strong how enduring, how courageous, must be beaten.

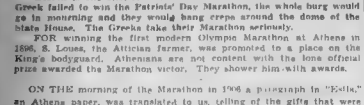
Boston is one city, Athens another. If Boston was Athens and a Greek failed to win the Patriots' Day Marathon, the whole burg would go in mourning and they would hang crepe around the dome of the State House. The Greeks take their Marathon seriously.

FOR winning the first modern Olympic Marathon at Athens in 1896, S. Louss, the Attician farmer, was promoted to a place on the King's bodyguard. Athenians are not content with the lone official prize awarded the Marathon victor. They shower him with awards.

ON THE morning of the Marathon in 1906 a paragraph in "Estia," an Athens paper, was translated to us, telling of the gifts that were to be given the Marathon winner. The paragraph read

"The 'Louvre,' the large firm of M. Caurilopoulos, will donate the statue of Hermes. The baker, Nicolas Raptis, will furnish him one loaf of bread daily for one year. The coffeehouse man, K. Krekmazis, will furnish him with three coffees daily for one year. The barber, Orphanidis, offers to shave him gratis for the rest of his life. Mr. Karanikas, hotel keeper, offers to give a luncheon every Sunday for a year to the victor and five of his friends, provided the victor is a Greek."

NOW WE are going to give you excerpts from Estia's story of the Marathon. Only exerpts, for it took the writer whole pages to unburden his grief. Tune in. Let Estia tell you about it



"The city of Athens was almost dead, yesterday. The entire population had taken possession of the Stadium, the streets of Hirodia, the Attieus and of Kifisia. It was a king of a labyrinth where thousands of people were watching and waiting eagerly for the results of the great Marathon . . .

It was 5:30 p. m. when the games in the Stadium were over and out on the field of Marathon the Race of Races started. Was the loss of the discus throw a bad omen on what was to come in the Marathon? We fear for the Marathon! We fear!

". . . One of the reporters asks a member of the committee how stands the Marathon. He loudly answers a Canadian is leading. The news reaches the ears of the crowds like a fierce bomb. The news spread electrically. The whole Stadium knew that a foreigner was leading. Sorrow was depicted upon the faces of all. The committee, noticing this, supplemented the news that a Canadian was first by a kilometer and that a Greek followed.

"Hope came back again. 'Courage!' exclaim the crowds. Courage!' It may be the Canadian will fall down like Flack, the Englishman . . . 'Yes, oh yes, he will fall down climbing up the long hill into Athens . . .

"It is 5 40 p. m. A light dew begins to cover the seats. It was refreshing. It gave life to dying hopes. As the moments go by, and every minute begins to count, anxiety grows. The crowds can read the truth in the bitter expression of the committee. But no one wants to believe it; no one wants to accept it. What then will happen? New rumors reach the ears of the spectators. The American has dropped back. The Italian and two Frenchmen have fallen down. The Greeks are coming! New hopes and new expectations. The national pride is in danger. The angel of Marathon must be a Greek, like the one of the victory of Miltiades. In the memory of all the victory of S. Louis is revived. As the seconds go by the victor in the Marathon a decade ago is presented to the imagination of all, like the sacred icon on a flag that is hoisted in the midst of an international arena . . .

"A general sadness spreads over the expression of all present, either because the darkness of sunset falls upon them or because of the gloom and pall cast by the news they are getting. Ten minutes—or rather 600 seconds—are only left, and each second is longer than a year, and each moment of a second is longer than a whole day. Suddenly a shot is fired from the Rizarian School.

"The first runner goes through the road to Kifissia. Only 10 minutes and he will be into the stadium. But who is he? To what nation does he belong? Nobody knows. 'He is a foreigner!' cry the crowds 'It is impossible!' say others. 'But yes, and second and third, too, are foreigners' comes the reply. No one could believe, would believe. Never mind. . . . Suddenly an unusual agitation and excitement reigns on the Bridge of Ilissos and further beyond the road of Hvrohis the Areteus.

"He is coming! He is coming! The crowds outside the Stadium hysterically are shouting. Sirens, whistles, horns and the hoof beat of galloping horses announce the arrival of the Marathon victor. It is a moment of highest spiritual life and exaltation. The crowd in the Stadium now is standing with bared heads, prayers on their lips. . . .

"The victor enters. He runs with short, springy steps. He is accompanied by Prince George of Crete, running gallantly beside him. On his breast we see the Maple Leaf of Canada. The British flag flutters triumphantly to the top of the mast. . . .

"We pay him deserved tribute. He is so gallant, so courageous! We all forget he is a foreigner and shout hurrah and applaud. The victor bows before the royal box, salutes, turns and leaves the track. And then—we remember!

"Sorrow casts its pall over all. Gloom, sadness sculks over the stadium. Silence reigns. It is the silence of highest calamity. . . . No one can believe the Marathon victor is a foreigner. . . . Fifteen minutes [illegible] to agony. We await the second victor. . . .

"Another salvo of shouts, shrieking of whistles, bedlam of sound announces the arrival of the second man. 'He is a Greek!' the crowds are shouting. All in vain. He is Svanberg, a Swede. . . . Soon after him comes Frank, an American. . . . All, all is lost!"

Now, perhaps you will believe the Greeks take their Marathons seriously. Don't be a Greek if Clarence De Mar or some other Bay Stater or Yankee fails to bring home the bacon in the big Marathon here on Patriots' Day. Cheer up! Don't be downhearted.

Notre Dame Players Once Forced to Use Ancient Equipment

This is the eighth instalment of the thrilling and impressive life story of Knute Rockne, the world's most famous football coach, who was killed in an airplane crash. It is written by Warren Brown, noted sports writer of the Chicago Herald-Examiner and lifelong personal friend of Rockne. Mr. Brown's interesting narrative will continue daily until he has unfolded his brilliant portrayal of Rockne and his achievements

CHAPTER 8

By WARREN BROWN

To begin with, football equipment was limited, and the available supply of shoes, uniforms head-gear and the like was used from year to year, until it had outlived even the limits of Notre Dame usefulness, which was the no plus ultra of limits, in those days.

Indeed, there is a story that the jersey of "Red" Salmon, one of the Notre Dame heroes at the turn of the century, had been handed down from season to season and was still in use by one of Rockne's first teams, in 1918.

While making no attempt to verify this tradition, its mere recital will give a general idea of the equipment problem.

Rockne, in distributing suits and shoes for football purposes, was a different person from the Rockne of the football field, or in his other daily contacts with the players.

Historic Jersey

As a freshman, Harry Mehre, now Georgia coach, had ambitions to play on a Notre Dame team.

"I started for the gym," Mehre says, "and got fifty miles in it, when I heard Rock's voice raised in caution to someone who had the temerity to ask him for a uniform.

"I went away from there, with a sad heart.

"The next day I got up my courage again, and started for the gym. I got a little closer, but again I heard Rock barking at someone, and I retired, in good order.

"I guess it was 10 days before I was able to get inside the gym, and actually ask for a suit.

"I was rewarded with one that was featured by a jersey with a lace-around effect. I know there are Notre Dame men of my time who claim they wore 'Red' Salmon's jersey. The one that Rock tossed at me was undoubtedly that which Frank Hering wore before Salmon got out of high school

"It had one advantage. If you were in a hurry, you could get in and out of it through your choice of holes."

Shower Problem

The shower problem was also acute.

There was one shower that was reasonably effective but Joe Brandy who had fireman's tactics was invariably out of his uniform and first under the shower

Athletes were in the habit of easing their way under the water, at first, and by the time they approached the one effective shower, Brandy was already sloshing about in the scattering water for yards around.

Some of the others had the nerve to dash under, and were forced to have recourse to another shower where, runs the testimony of Barry of Mehre, of Mohardt, of Wynne and of Kiley, one tiny stream of water poured straight down, an other slanted off, almost at right angles, and another veered off to the left.

"I sprained my ankle," says Mehre, "and I was very touched at the way Rock carried on, about it. That is, until I found out he'd left so badly, not because of my ankle, but because of the amount of tape that had to be used to wrap it."

The tape problem hadn't been solved, as late as 1922, which was the freshman year of the quartet who were to become famous two years later, as the "Four Horsemen."

Tape Was Scarce

The story is told that Elmer Layden, one of the "Horsemen" sprined his ankle during his freshman year, some time after another freshman had been thoroughly taped because of a rib injury

The tape necessary for Layden's first aid was stripped from the side of the other freshman

Two years later, and freshman at Notre Dame would have considered that an honor, but it is reported that, at the time the incident occurred, the freshman was quite sore about it.

In later years, when he had become coach at Georgia Mehre was telling of the system in vogue there, with regard to sweat shirts "I'm a day are issued to the Georgians and uniforms are available in profusion

"At Notre Dame, in my time," he said, "you were given one outfit when you reported for practice. You practiced in it, and you played in it. More than that, you saved it, so that Rock could have it for whoever came after you."

Rockne was in complete charge of the packing of the trunks, and the Notre Dame athletic association then, possessed two trunks.

There was always excitement on the squad, when a trip was impending, and the bulletin board was scanned closely for two notices

The first was the names of the players who were to make the trip

MacMAHON TO AID LARIVEE IN BOUT

By RINGSIDE

Denny MacMahon, who guided Kid Kaplan to the world's lightweight title, will second Leo Larivee of Waterbury, Ct., when he clashes with Dave Shade at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena on next Tuesday night.

MacMahon is on his way East from Los Angeles, where he recently pulled Paulino in his winning bout with Leo Kennedy. MacMahon has had a hand in the development of Larivee and is confident the Waterbury warrior will win from Shade

Tommy Rios of Mexico has been signed to oppose Johnny Indrisano of East Boston in another ten.

Gridmen Open Spring Play at Notre Dame

It had been suggested that spring football practice be dropped, but Mrs. Rockne and school officials decided the dead leader would have wanted it to be resumed, and a call was issued for candidates to report today. The drills will continue until the end of this month and will be voluntary.

The problem of selecting a successor to Rockne still is being pondered by officials of the university.

Gar Wood's America Set for Record Try

Miami Beach, Fla., April 10 (AP)—Odis Porter, timer for the American Automobile Association, was expected here today to install electrical timing apparatus along the measured mile course in Indian Creek for Gar Wood's attempt to regain the world's speedboat record.

Miss Wattles Plays Mrs. Hill for Title

Greensboro, N. C., April 10 (AP)—Betty Dix Perkins, British star and medalist in the Sedgefield woman's dogwood golf tournament went down, 5 and 4, today before the superior play of Peggy Wattles of Ruffalo in their semi-final match

Miss Wattles tomorrow, in the finals, will meet Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City, who beat Helen Waring of New York, 3 and 1, in the other semi-final.

ICE FANS WANT NEW HOCKEY LEAGUE

President C. F. Adams of the Bruins should mark, label and remember:

"We, the undersigned, believe Boston should have another major league hockey team. We think by combining teams of the Canadian-American and International Hockey League a fine eight-club major league circuit can be organized.

"In the present National League one of the two Montreal teams and one of the two New York teams can be transferred to the new major which with Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Providence, Boston Bruin Cubs and the new team in the Bronx, New York, would make an ideal eight-club circuit. The new league could be called the American. Thus hockey, like baseball, would have an American and National League and hockey would have a real world's series like baseball."

BRAVES AND SOX BACK HOME TODAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Our ball clubs are home today. The Braves arrived from Washington and the Red Sox pulled in from Columbus this morning.

Manager Bill McKechnie led his warriors to the Hotel Victoria, their headquarters until next Tuesday, and then took them out to the Wigwam for a final workout before the two-game city series with the Sox, which will open at Fenway Park tomorrow and be concluded at Braves Field on Sunday.

Both teams have been in training seven full weeks and are reported to be in better trim to start the season than for several years

There isn't a single casualty among the Tribal regulars and Gene Rye and Hal Rhyne, the only Sox cripples, are expected to be ready to play before the end of the month.

Pilots of Each Team Look for Better Year

Neither McKechnie nor John "Shano" Collins, Fenway manager, is predicting a pennant or even a first division berth for his charges, but each is confident that his club is stronger and will win more games in the coming campaign than it did last season.

The lineup McKechnie will start against the Sox tomorrow will include two new heavy-hitting outfielders and two new slugging infielders and shapes up on paper as possessing more all-around strength than any Tribal outfit in the past decade.

The only fault that might be found with the Braves is their pitching. And that could be a lot worse.

McKechnie doesn't appear to have enough mound strength just now to get out of the second division, but if he can grab off one of the many fingers he is flickering for and Harold Haid, who is still nursing a sore arm out on the Coast, ever rounds into shape, the Braves should stand an even chance of breaking into the top four.

The club has punch galore and plenty of defensive ability.

INDIANS CAPTURE CAN.-AM. HOCKEY CROWN

BRUIN CUBS LOSE FINAL TILT, 3-2

Springfield, April 10—Springfield Indians brought the Marathon playoff series in the Can-Am League to an end by beating the Boston Bruin Cubs, 3 to 2, in the seventh game of their championship series to win the Henri Fontaine cup and the league title.

A goal by Earl Seibert in the final minute of play proved the deciding tally. It came with Springfield holding a 2-to-1 lead from the first period. Seibert caught the Boston team down the ice and registered, unassisted, at 19:10.

Fifteen seconds later, Paul Runge put the Cubs back in the game with a goal in which Yank Boyd and Jack Pratt also figured, but the Indians held the Cubs off during the remaining few seconds of the game.

The Indians were the first to score, Saunders counting at 5:11 in the first period, assisted by Waite who batted a pass out to him after Grant had made a neat catch of Hexmer's shot. Burke squared the issue for Boston at 15:35. This goal was protested by Moore, Springfield goalie, who claimed a Boston player obstructed his vision.

Carrigan Puts Indians In Lead by Solo Dash

With Callighen in the box at 16:35, Gene Carrigan put on a brilliant dash to put the Indians back into the lead again. The tally remained at 2 to 1 until Seibert broke loose for the final minute to be followed by Runge's goal, scored in a scrimmage at the Springfield net.

Fan Thrown Out for Hitting Boston Player

A Boston player claimed he was hit by a ringside fan and the game was held up for five minutes until police could remove the fan.

JOLLEY WINS GOLF MATCH

London, April 10 (AP)—The class of the older professionals began to make itself felt in the second round today of match play in the Roehampton invitation tournament. Herbert Jolly, Michael Bingham, Charles Whitcombe and Fred Robson stroking their way to victory.

Whitcombe had the hardest task, disposing of Capt. Cedric Ducat, younger who eliminated Abe Mitchell in the first round. The Enzyder cup captain won by the narrow margin of one hole.

Jolly defeated G. Sanderson, five and four; Bingham beat Mark Seymour four and two, and Robson eliminated Bert Hodson, one up. The first and second rounds were at 18 holes.

Swedish King Teams Up With Cochet

Paris, April 10 (AP)—Gustave, King of Sweden, and Henri Cochet, king of the courts, paired today at tennis to play a drawn match with Pierre Landry and Christian Boussus, two of France's top ranking players.

With a big gallery at the Bois de Boulogne courts, wildly cheering him on, the 72-year-old King skipped nimbly about, holding up very capably his end of the match.

The two Kings defeated Landry and Boussus yesterday. After today's match had gone two games each, King Gustave announced he had had enough tennis for the day and that the issue would be decided tomorrow at the racing club.

B. U. Lacrosse Team Off for Army Game

Col. Ruppert Is Seriously Ill

New York, April 10—Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees baseball team, is gravely ill with acute bronchitis.

Col. Ruppert contracted a cold several days ago, and has been confined to his bed ever since. Every precaution against complications is being taken because of the baseball magnate's advanced years.

HAWKS WIN IN OVERTIME BY 3 TO 2

Montreal, April 10—The Chicago Blackhawks took the lead in the playoff series for the Stanley Cup by defeating the Montreal Canadiens, 3 to 2, in a long overtime game. The Hawks won out in the third overtime period after coming from behind to tie the score in the last four minutes of the regular playing time.

The victory gave Chicago two victories in the three games played so far in the series.

The winning goal came after 13 minutes and 50 seconds of play in the third overtime period from the stick of Marvin "Cyclone" Wentworth, veteran Chicago defense man.

Stewart Adams, young forward, assisted in the counter. The teams had battled through the regular 60 minutes of play to a 2-2 tie and then played two 20-minute overtime sessions without a score before reaching a decision in the third.

NAME 4 BROWN CAPTAINS

Providence, R. I., April 10 (AP)—Fol. Brown varsity winter sports captains were elected today by the letter men of the respective teams. The men elected were: Stanley Paige of Providence, hockey; John Caulkins of Brooklyn, N. Y., basketball; Hugh Butler of New York, swimming, and Ben Spiwak of Elmhurst, L. I., wrestling.

Paige is a veteran of two years, played center ice on the second forward line this season and is the captain-elect of soccer, being the first Brown athlete to win two captaincies in years.

Caulkins is a three-sport man, holding letters in football, basketball and baseball, and was the second high scoring man on this season's team. He plays forward on the hoop team.

Butler is a breast stroke swimmer who won his letter this year for the first time, and Spiwak has just been awarded his second letter as a 165-pound grappler.

New Links Will Be Named After Wright

To memorialize the introduction of the royal game of golf in this city, Mayor Curley and Chairman William P. Long of the Park Commission agreed that the new $500,000 municipal golf course at the West Roxbury-Hyde Park line should be given the name of George Wright, 84-year-old president of the Wright & Ditson Company.

Mr. Wright was the pioneer who started the first round at Franklin Park on Dec. 12, 1890, on a course laid out for the occasion by his friend, John Smith of this city. His playmates in the tryout were Fred Mansfield, Sam McDonald and Temple Craig, all of whom have since passed on.

OTHER PRIZE WINNERS
Albert Hewitson, 14 Hawthorn ave., Arlington.
E. Reed, 17 Hillsboro rd., Medford.
C. B. Ryan, White River Junction, Vt.
George J. Hamilton, Jr., 30 Beal st., Winthrop.
C. R. Twomsley, 249 River st., Mattapan.
Mrs. D. J. Maxwell, 20 Magazine st., Roxbury.

BY THE LIMERICK EDITOR

Bright and early this morning we mailed tickets to these fortunate fans so that they will receive them in plenty of time to be guests of the Boston Evening American at the second game of the series between the Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers at Braves Field on April 16.

Al Grahame will receive four grandstand seats for his excellent contribution, while John Smith will get two seats and the other six, one each.

These winners and their friends will miss the opening day ceremonies, but they will probably see a better ball game than those who captured tickets to the initial tilt. The players are usually nervous and off form during their debut, but after one game they settle down and perform at their best."

The seventh and next to the last limerick in the Boston Evening American's record-breaking contest also appears on these pages today.

Tomorrow we will announce the winners of the third limerick and mail out a dozen tickets for the third Braves-Robins game at the Wigwam on April 16.

Address your letters to the Limerick Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

And don't forget, if you prefer writing a complete limerick about any of the Braves, Red Sox, Yankees or Robins, to filling in the last line of those appearing in the paper, it is O. K. Your efforts will receive every consideration and you will stand as good a chance of winning as the next one.

The contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England with the exception of employes of the Boston Evening American, their families and relatives.

is the prize rookie of the season to date. In a score of exhibition games he has his close to .500 and most of his drives have been for extra bases and have knocked in runs.

Wes Schulmerich, 210-pound giant from the Coast League, who is holding down leftfield, hasn't set the world afire with his clouting, as yet, but when he connects that old tomato travels fast and far, and his minor league record indicates that he is as nifty with the willow as Worthington.

These two newcomers will flank Walter Berger, who hit .310 and knocked out 38 home runs last season, his first in the majors, and is counted upon to do as well if not better this year.

Sheely, formerly with the White Sox and Pirates, led the Coast League in hitting, with an average of over .400, so he should have no trouble keeping above the .300 mark in the big show. He isn't the fastest player in the league, but he's a steady fielder, and can take care of everything that comes his way.

Wilson has been fielding perfectly at the hot corner all spring and if his bat started in hit. The Tribe can send him back to Rochester and get a refund of $20,000 if it wished, but the player will probably remain here and the money in Rochester.

That peerless keystone pair, Freddie Maguire and Rabbit Maranville, complete the quartet.

Manager John Collins of the Red Sox is still very much undecided about his starting lineup and won't select the nine which will start tomorrow until just before game time.

Wayland Golf Club Course Improved

Considerable improvements have been made on this course since last fall. The greens are in perfect condition.

The clubhouse has been remodelled and a new cafeteria has been put into operation, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Atkins.

John Adams Patterson, the owner of the club, has received a good response to appeals for club membership. Plans have been made for the construction of a large outdoor swimming pool, and it is hoped to have it in operation early in July.

Price to Coach California Team

Berkeley, Cal., April 10 (AP)—W. W. Monahan, graduate manager of the University of California, has announced the appointment of C. M. ("Nibs") Price as basketball coach.

Price, basketball mentor at the university since 1925, stepped from the post last year in announcing his resignation as football coach, a position he also had held.

Collins Comes to Terms With Phils

Philadelphia, April 10 (AP)—Phil Collins, star pitcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, today signed a two-year contract with the club. He was the last of the club's holdouts.

The pitcher arrived in Philadelphia early today and conferred with L. C. Bush, president of the club, for a short time, after which came the announcement that Phil was in the fold for the season.

Collins, whose home is in Chicago, said he had been working out at Northwestern University and was in good condition. Last year Collins won 16 games for the Phils and lost 11.

White Sox Sell Berg to Indians

Chicago, April 10 (AP)—Moe Berg, White Sox catcher who refused to sign a new contract because of salary differences, today was sent to the Cleveland Indians. The deal was on a cash basis. Berg showed signs of starring with the White Sox in 1929, but injuries and illness kept him on the bench or in the hospital most of the 1930 season.

A fast semipro baseball team under the direction of Jack Salter is being formed. Many noted diamond stars will be with the club. Managers desiring a strong attraction, call Jack Salter, Garrison 9811 or write Salter at 97 Wayland st., Roxbury.

Princeton Crew in Need of Good Stroke

Princeton, N. J., April 10 (AP)—Princeton, the only major college crew without a climax race, is basing its hopes for a winner this year on the ability of Coach Chuck Logg to develop a stroke oar from green material.

When the Tiger oarsmen answered the first call in the winter, prospects for a winning crew looked bright, with Johnny Clingerman, varsity stroke two years ago, and Art Strang, stroke of last year's freshman eight, both apparently set for a big season. Then Clingerman left school and Strang was declared ineligible.

The choice for the all-important seat in the stern of the boat now seems to rest among Millard West, a junior, and two sophomores, Brewster Smith and Pell. Of the three, West appears to have the edge at the present time, having stroked the "B" boat to several close decisions over the "A" crew, with Smith setting the pace. During the last few days, Smith has rowed at No. 4, with West stroking the "A" boat and Pell the "B."

Varsity Eight Slow in Developing

The varsity crew, as such, has been slow to develop, Logg preferring to divide his strength equally between two boats and let the youngsters work out their own destinies in actual competition. The six lettermen on the squad have been divided between the two shells, with Hawkey, Sheenan and Merrill rowing in the middle of the "A" boatload, and West, Jim Pease, captain last year, and Shieffelin in the "B" boatload. The rest of the places have been filled by members of last year's junior varsity and freshmen crews, among them Wells, Bolzow, Kellogg and Hereford from the Jayvees and Pell, Speer, Pflaumer, G. Williams and Cummings from the 1930 frosh.

Along with Logg's other troubles, Capt. Colmore, the coxswain, has been nursing a fractured arm, suffered in wrestling last winter, and has been out only a few times.

John Rutherford, who rowed at No. 5 last year, and Johnny Dayton, a promising sophomore from last year's frosh crew, have been participating in other sports and reported late to Logg, and neither has been service in the 'Varsity varsity boats.

Unlike the nine crews which race at Poughkeepsie, the Tiger oarsmen have no particular race at which to aim, the winning of which would erase any other defeats.

The most interest this year probably will center in the first regatta, that on the Charles river at Boston May 2, with Harvard and Massachusetts Tech. It will be the first time Princeton and John Harvard have matched strokes since the severance of athletic relations in 1927.

Following that encounter is the Carnegie Cup regatta at Derby May 18, with Yale and Cornell as opponents, and then the Childs Cup regatta on Lake Carnegie, Princeton, May 30, against Penn and Columbia.

MRS. BAKER RETURNS TO GOLF

By BILL GRIMES

Despite rumors to the contrary, Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., former W. G. A. champion, will actively engage in golf competition this season.

During the W. G. A. team matches and the state championships last season Mrs. Baker was not in the best of health and at the conclusion of spring competition was advised to take a complete rest. As Mrs. Baker played little or no golf last fall, rumors began to circulate that the former titleholder had retired from competition.

Mrs. Baker returned from a 3000-mile automobile trip to Florida this week. Accompanied by her children, she made the trip in a week and is apparently in the best physical condition she has enjoyed in two years.

Although Mrs. Baker relinquished her title to Miss Dorothy Richards of Weston last season, at the Salem Country Club, she is still the outstanding player of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts.

For years, she had played No. 1 on the Southern District team and only on the rarest occasions has she been defeated during the team match season. Over a period of years, during which she has met the best in the ranks of the W. G. A., Mrs. Baker has firmly established a claim as the leading woman golfer in New England.

Mrs. Baker Will Play With Southern District

Mrs. Baker will again play with the Southern District, which team she has represented for years, despite the fact that she was eligible to play with Central, many times winner of the championship. Although the Southern District team has not been able to annex top honors, through the efforts and fight instilled by Mrs. Baker, they have been right up in the fight every season and frequently upset matters by defeating potential champions.

Paired with Raynor M. Gardiner, Mrs. Baker will defend her mixed foursome club pair championship at the Essex County and Polo Club late next month.

Whether or not Mrs. Baker will enter the State championship is not known at the present writing. If the team match season is not too much of a physical strain, Mrs. Baker will attempt to regain her crown. Unless Mrs Baker competes, the W. G. A. championship, which will be played at the conclusion of the team matches, will be lacking in color, for the former titleholder is the big attraction and is responsible for the keen interest which has centered around this classic for many years.

With the return of seasonable weather, the women golfers have been practising arduously. The tryouts for the district teams will be held next Monday.

HAGEN TO TEST STEELE

PAIR CLASH IN GARDEN MAT SHOW

Complete Card at Garden Tonight

ONE FALL TO A FINISH

Dick Daviscourt of California vs. Sergei Kalmikoff, of Russia.

Ray Steele of California vs. George Hagen of Brooklyn.

THIRTY-MINUTE LIMIT BOUTS TWO OUT OF THREE FALLS TO A DECISION

Karl Voget of Germany vs. Wee Willie Davis, Virginia.

Steele ranked as one of the leading grapplers in the heavyweight group. He is a big, powerful fellow and knows the fine points of the mat game.

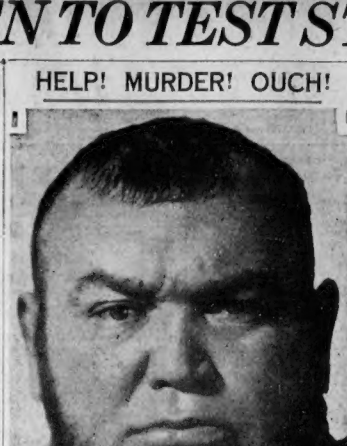
In the one fall finish tussle, Dick Daviscourt of California will take on "Whiskers Kalmikoff. The latter is said to be another Bull Montana in action, but he beats Bill by having three yards or more of whiskers. He showed in New York the other night, losing to Steele.

Steinke and Dusek Should Give Action

Hans Steinke, German heavyweight, will have Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark., as an opponent in another bout. Steinke is considered by many keen judges of the mat game as the leading wrestler on tonight's card.

This contest will have a 30-minute limit. Other 30-minute matches will find Paul Jones of Houston battling Mike Romano of Italy and Karl Voget of Germany opposing Wee Willie Davis of Virginia.

HELP! MURDER! OUCH!



Shut that window—they're coming in the door! Shut that door they're coming through the floor! Take it away! How'd you like to wake up and find it looking through the window? Dick Daviscourt will find it on the opposite corner of the mat in the Boston Garden, tonight. It's SERGEI KALMIKOFF, the Siberian Gorilla. One tough hombre, say we.

HARVARD SQUAD OFF SUNDAY

The Harvard varsity baseball squad players will leave Boston on Sunday afternoon, April 12, for Williamsburg, Va., where on Monday, April 13, they will engage in a six-game spring recess schedule.

Harvard will play the following teams: Monday, April 13, William & Mary at Williamsburg; Tuesday, April 14, University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.; Wednesday, April 15, U. S. GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Golf's Greatest Teacher

Many of you golfers, perhaps without knowing it, shift your stroking method violently when you attempt a short pitch or run-up shot. You crouch over the ball, muscles stiffen and wrists, you execute a sort of stab at the ball. Sometimes the result is fair enough, but experience has shown you that at best you get this result only now and then. You must come to the principle that the short shot is made without change of method, the sole difference being that your swing is shorter. Every other principle of swinging is likewise maintained, such as looking at the ball and giving it your whole attention, taking time to be smooth and rhythmic, and so on. Change of stroking method, which is almost certain to make you hasty and jerky, causes a greater proportion of mishaps with this department of your game, I venture, than you may have heretofore suspected. Make this change for the better this season.

COUNT WINS, BUT IS GIVEN SURPRISE

By JACK CONWAY

The Count received his big jolt when the match had gone only 20 seconds. Referee Timekeeper Charley Donnell completed his instructions, Mc-Kay went after Zarynoff much like he would go at a sparring partner.

The Count was trying to get warmed up while the capacity audience were lighting up cigars as they prepared to wait an hour or so to see a fall.

Jack Conway

The pugnacious McKay had ideas of his own as to the proper way to start one of those finish wrestling battles. He crashed the Count on his neck, picked him up clamped on the Russian's shoulders on a face lock for good measure and finished the Count's shoulders against the canvas.

The Count looked rather sheepish when he scrambled to his feet. He reminded me of the small boy who was caught with his fingers in the jam jar.

The action was so rapid that many of the fans didn't know what it was all about until Whitey Allen landed on the information that McKay had won the first fall in 20 seconds.

Zarynoff Comes From Behind to Win

It was a different Zarynoff who resumed hostilities. He was as agile as a cat as well as alert. The Count used a head dive to wear McKay down. The Count's years of experience as a member of the Czar's personal guard made him an expert dodger. He leaps in the air and clamps his legs around an opponent's head with the same ease that he used to mount one of his horses when in the army.

McKay was brought crashing to the canvas on numerous occasions. The pressure the Count applied with his legs also wore Pat down.

Zarynoff varied his attack by scoring with several flying tackles. There were some hot mixups along the ropes with both crashing to the press row.

McKay finally lifted the Count in the air and started an aeroplane whirl. The Count broke the hold as he hit the canvas.

Pat tried to end things with a reverse body hold, but the Count scored with a flying chancery over shoulder and crashed McKay to the canvas for a fall. The time was 37 min. 22 sec.

Pat missed a tackle and went out of the ring. He was in a bad condition when he resumed wrestling. His was helpless before the Count's attack, and the latter finished it in the bout and declared Zarynoff the winner in 3 min. 4 sec.

Vlch Lizoff of Southern California and Jack Wagner of Providence went 45 minutes to a spirited draw in the semi-final. Lizoff threw Jack in 5 minutes, 22 seconds with an inside crotch hold and body slam.

Parker to Play for Yale Against Green

New Haven, Ct., April 9.—Coach Jim Wolf announced that Captain Parker, Yale outfielder who has been ill at his home, would be in the Eli lineup when they meet Dartmouth here tomorrow.

Parker was unable to make the southern trip with the 101 squad during the spring vacation. The Dartmouth game will be the second Eastern intercollegiate League games played by Yale this season.

AT THE LISTENING POST

CHANGING CALL letters is another of the alterations being made in connection with WLEX, or we should say, what was WLEX. No longer will the station carry the Lexington identification. The Voice of the Minute Man has gone from the air. Official sanction was accorded The Bay State Broadcasting Company yesterday, whereby the Federal Radio Comission approval intends changing the call letters to WAAB. There appears to be no particular significance to the letters in so far as location is concerned. We rather expected some such letters as WBQM or WBQN, indicating Squantum, but now we're attempting to be humorous, which is not the purpose of this item at all. Good-bye and not au revoir to WLEX; henceforth and forever to be associated with memories of the past. Keeping step in the parade of progress, march of time, or whatever it may be called, is up hall Greater Boston's newest radio transmitter, WAAB.

UNDER THE direction of the Shepherd Broadcasting Service, the new unit will be formally dedicated and make its initial bow for listeners on or about April 25. Linus Travers, in charge of production, is busily engaged in the preparation of a suitable program that will be appropriate and in keeping with the occasion.

DEPARTURE of young Mr. Cashman from the production staff of WNAC means that he is on another rung upward, climbing the ladder. Columbia is taking him to New York, which is no more than his ability and personality deserve. "Eddie" is what they term in radio circles a "natural." All success and good luck to him.

NAMES IS NAMES: Howard Rockney, undoubtedly New York's foremost radio critic, states the road he has traveled to success has been rough in spots. He also says he has swung along the famous "Road to Dublin."

* * *

HEAVY FAN MAIL has been the response to the dramatic work of the WBZ-RKO Players following their air presentation of "Creature of the Night" as adapted from "Dracula." Another episode of the scheduled this afternoon at 3:30.

READING WHAT H. F. had to say yesterday in his radio "colyum" about the beautiful view from the new WLW studios, gives us the thought that our good friends on the staff of WBZ will miss the fabulous panorama no more than the Statler. Moving over to the Bradford and enlarged quarters has drawbacks after all.

PAT ROONEY arrives in town tomorrow it is said. He will do his famous waltz clog on the air, in addition to singing "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady." Complete details in our next issue.

FEATURES ON THE AIR

President Hoover will deliver three radio addresses to the nation Monday and Tuesday in a series of public events to be broadcast over NBC networks. The President will be heard Monday over WEI at 10:30 a. m., when he speaks as the titular head of the American Red Cross. WEEI will also carry his two addresses Tuesday when Mr. Hoover speaks first at 12:30 p. m. in a program memorializing Pan-American Day, then at 8:30 he will talk in connection with a celebration marking the 400th anniversary of Tuskegee Institute.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER tonight . . . Lowell Thomas will be the first of seven speakers heard on successive Friday nights when he talks on "Sir Hubert Wilkins, Modern Explorer" over WEEI and WBZA at 10. The series will consist of writers and literary figures whose talks deal with current publishing affairs and anecdotes arising out of the work of collecting material for writing . . . Broadway's latest Parisian import, Jeanne Aubert, comedienne, will contribute to the chocolate hour program, WBZA at 8 . . . Luke Kelley, Notre Dame '12, and captain of the football team in 1911, will tell of his acquaintanceship with Knute Rockne on the Bond program on WNAC at 8:30 . . . The "old-timers" program over WNAC at 8:30 halve the number of songs in the program and double their length . . . And tomorrow from WEEI at 11:30 a. m. the "Keys to Happiness" program will offer Montague Glass, creator of Potash and Perlmutter, and a self made pianist. He will be introduced by Sigmund Spaeth who reviews, in a lesson, yet is the master of sight instruments. Together these men will participate in a four handed piano rendition of Hungarian Dance No. 2.

HOT AIR FACTS . . . Now that WLEX has become WAAB, it has the lowest set of the "old" call letters WAAB wasn't what the owner wanted: they preferred WBOS, signifying Boston . . . Don't forget radio time begins an hour earlier the 26th . . . Studio gate-crashing has become a problem with broadcasters. On "closed" programs male crashers pass with the aid of phony names and the ladies get through by posing as wives of the artists . . . Will Osborne and Orrin Nelson will entertain a shimmy-away o'er the CBS . . . Revenue of the network b'casters in 1930 is estimated at 30 million dollars . . . WGN, Chicago, has just added three more comic strips to its microphone menu . . . The CBS "Mr. & Mrs." skit may not be heard after May . . . Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Extension of the hours set for quarantine service in the Port of Boston will be sought as the result of a meeting of official representatives of all steamship lines operating steamers to Boston from foreign countries held at the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Frank S. Davis, manager of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber and a member of the Boston Port Authority, left for Washington last night to confer with Secretary Wilbur as the representative of foreign shipping officials in this port.

Sunrise to sunset quarantine, which is now the rule in the Port of Boston, in the opinion of the officials, is too limited a service. Extension to 24 or at least 16-hour service will be sought.

A meeting arranged by the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce committee on customs, immigration and quarantine indicated that the subject was regarded as most important in furthering the port by Boston shipping interests.

Rockne Won in Spite of Great Handicaps

The second, and of almost equal importance, began:

"The following men will pack their own suits . . ."

Big man, indeed, at Notre Dame, was the player whose football equipment Rockne had chosen to compress into those two trunks.

"Try walking down the street, some day, carrying a suit-case, and a lot of football equipment, especially a head-guard, and see how it feels," suggests Mehre. "We found it very embarrassing.

Used to Hardships

Another of the equipment problems had to do with shoes.

Kilay came up with a pair whose cleats had worn through the soles, so that each step pained exceedingly.

He stood it as long as he could, and finally limped into Rockne's presence, and prepared to dare the consequences by asking for another pair.

He never did make the plea.

"In my day," Rockne told him, "Notre Dame men were inured to hardships. They took what came their way, and thrived on it. We're getting nothing around here now but a lot of sissies, who whine and cry for this and for a bles. What's the matter with you?"

"Nothing," said Kiley, who went on his way.

Rockne, in addition to his coaching duties, was also trainer. The training equipment consisted of the precious tape, a pail of water, and a bottle of iodine.

The Rockne formula was always the same, for bruises and cuts.

The water and the iodine were applied, the patient was given a slap on the back.

"You probably won't sleep tonight," said Rockne, "and you might not sleep tomorrow night. But the third night you'll be sure to sleep, and rest is the best thing for you."

Notre Dame has come a long way from those days of struggle when Rockne and Jesse Harper, the later Rockne alone guided its football destinies.

Valuable Lessons

It has come a long way, indeed, since "Buck" Fennes first appeared as trainer, and some new players were installed, causing the members of the football squad to feel that they were being pampered.

However, the lessons that Rockne learned in conservation of equipment were never forgotten.

It was because of that that a situation, which at first mystified beholders of the Notre Dame-Southern California game of last year, was finally explained by Rockne, after all sorts of attempts had been made by others.

Notre Dame, for that game, wore, instead of the regulation solid blue jerseys, an arrangement which featured a splash of white across the shoulders.

No one could remember having seen a Notre Dame team outfitted thus before. In fact, the only variation remembered was the wearing of green jerseys, as the team had done, from time to time, when opponents' jerseys were made of the same blue shade as the color of Notre Dame.

"It's to provide an optical illusion," one befuddled one critic. "Rockne wants to make his players seem smaller than they actually are."

Another decided that the white splashes were to insure more accurate handling of forward passes.

'Mystery' Explained

I had no opinion on the subject, so I asked Rockne about it.

"There's no mystery," he said.

"A couple of years ago, a salesman contributed to that he had something new in the way of a jersey for use in games where the temperature was high. It is really a jersey of silk, and because the shoulders get the most of the wear and tear, and there is nothing quite as unstoppable as a run in silk, the shoulders were splashed with common, white cotton ribbing.

"We used the suits once before, against Georgia Tech, and did not have another opportunity.

"When it came time to get ready for the Southern California trip, I looked around to see what we had. I wanted to have my team look natty, and intended to buy entirely new equipment, if necessary. Tucked away in one of the trunks, I found those white and blue jerseys.

"So we used them, that's all.

"I still think the boys looked nice in them, don't you?"

Rockne lived to see the day when a Notre Dame player could be taped from head to foot, if he so chose.

But he always liked to look back to those great days, summed up so aptly by Mehre:

"If the sports writers knew the kind of equipment we were playing in, they'd have made us all All Americans, on gameness alone!"

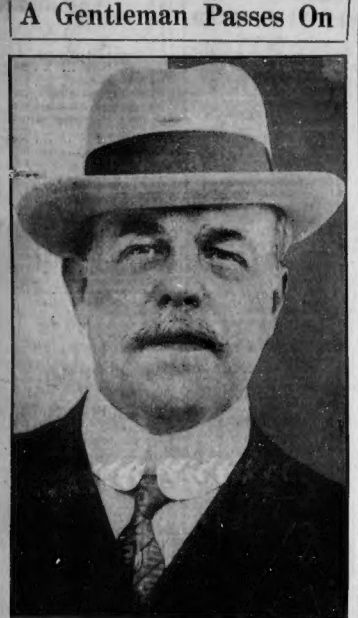
A Gentleman Passes On



NICHOLAS LONGWORTH

The passing of Nicholas Longworth removes a distinctly major figure from our public life.

His career was one of true distinction and of honorable public usefulness. A conservative Republican throughout his life, he served his party with loyalty, dignity and effectiveness. His attitude toward political adversaries was one of fairness and respect.

Three times he was elected to the great office of Speaker of the House of Representatives, and had he lived he would doubtless again have become the Speaker upon the convening of the newly elected Congress.

Widely mentioned for the presidency in 1927, he was a man whom his party delighted to honor, and so amiable and appealing was his human side that even his opponents derived pleasure from the honors that he received.

His nature was rich and many-sided; his character had strength and stature; his code was that of a gentleman.

And his death is mourned by all, not only among the large circle of his intimates, to which his engaging charm and personal talents endeared him, but in the larger world of public life, where friend and foe, alike, are conscious of their loss.

The Chip Industry

Winners of lottery prizes are a bit nervous lest the old 1829 seizure law be invoked to make them pass over their winnings to the county poor. A test case may be made in Buffalo, where an obscure citizen "copped" the $860,000 prize in a British sweepstakes.

The Attorney-General of the State says he is a little amused, but admits the law has still some teeth in it. It is not by any means in abeyance, though it has been invoked only in trifling cases.

Central New York, with a penchant for fighting roosters, however, thinks it no trifle. Mains there have been steadily raided, and the sheriff has made them contribute heavily to the support of the local indigent. Dry raiders in other sections had made it a practice to break into card games on Sunday morning, when the green baize is piled with money.

Hence devotees of chance, that fickle jade, prefer to play with chips. The only beneficiary of the seizure law, if it is enforced on the big scale, will be the chip foundry.

A Man of Grit

Is there anything more wonderful than the human machine? A Minnesotan who passed on a few days ago at 97 attributed his robust health to a daily spoonful of sand and a sip of kerosene.

By taking one he didn't notice the other, and together they gave him grit and "go." And with all that "sand" in his character he wouldn't notice a little of it in his bearings.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

IF MEN and women could be classified and card-indexed, picking a husband or wife would be as easy and simple as selecting an apple or a bunch of asparagus.

* * *

You'd simply say to yourself, "I want that type of husband," or "that brand of wife," and you'd look around until you found it, and be satisfied.

For instance, wives might be classed as follows: The strictly modern; the sweet domestic homemaker; the jazz-wife or baby-doll; the hard working-drudge; the social climber; the reformer; the nagger, etc. But, alas, they don't come that way.

Many a modern business woman is a good home-maker; many a perfect home-maker is a prize nagger; many an eloquent nagger is a faithful drudge or a wild jazz-baby; and many a fluffy baby-doll is a social climber.

And, with husbands, it's the same. There is the nice tame Regular Husband, who works hard all day, comes home promptly to dinner every evening, pays the bills, picks up his own things, and admires his own wife.

* * *

And there is the philandering husband, who regards marriage as a parking space, where he can leave a woman until he gets through playing around and is ready to go home nights.

* * *

God gave us all varieties and combinations to suit our tastes and purposes, and match our own dispositions and temperaments. And the ideal husband—or wife—is the one who makes you HAPPY!

HOW TO ERADICATE THE WRINKLES

The "Railroad Problem" in this country gives the railroad corporations just as many wrinkles as it puts in Uncle's forehead.

Wise mergers of the nation's many systems into several GREAT, PROFIT-PAYING, SERVICE-GIVING, TRANS-CONTINENTAL lines must come, if the railroads themselves are to survive and the public is to have the service to which it is entitled.

This co-operation is the "wrinkle eradicator."

The 'Bossy' Waiters

By WINIFRED BLACK.

WHEN MY RICH Uncle dies and leaves me a few thousand dollars and I open a nice, cozy little restaurant and make some money with the restaurant, there are a few things I am going to have and do and be.

Winifred Black

Quiet corners, sunny windows, a canary in a cage, a Persian cat in the basket on the cashier's desk, one or two pots of cheerful simple, plain things, like primroses and cowslips, you know; plants that grow wild in the fields and make you think of times when you used to go out into the meadows and pick wildflowers for teacher and wild strawberries for your city cousin.

Little, simple plants that make you think of meadow larks and their nests hidden in the long grass, and the way they sit on the fence and call "gee what a beautiful day" as you run past.

And I'm going to have waiters that will not snatch the menu card away from you the instant you have given your order.

But, most of all, I'm going to have waiters who will let you alone till you make up your mind what you want to eat or ask them to help you make it up.

Last night we went into the restaurant, my two friends and I.

We'd been very busy all day and we were tired and hungry and cross.

One of us was wearing rather a goodish fur coat and one wore a pair of diamond earrings that looked prosperous, and the other is the sort of person who always sets as if she had money in the bank as well as in her purse, and, oh, what a time we had with the waiters.

One pulled out the chairs, one smoothed the cloth, one filled the glasses and one rushed in mad haste for menu cards.

Could we sit and talk comfortably over what we wanted to have? Not a chance.

Did one of us dare to whisper to the other something about a porterhouse steak, rare, with French fried potatoes, and, let's see, wouldn't a little salad be nice—something crisp and green, don't you know.

"Filet mignon," said the waiter in a sort of husky, whispered shout of triumph.

"That's what you would like, ladies—yes, no?"

"And an artichoke salad, may I suggest, and afterward a peach Melba and a little black coffee perhaps, and a bite of Camembert," and before we could say aye, yes or no away he went and there we sat, tied to the track like the man in the old last day of school recitation.

And when the hateful dinner came, the dinner that we did not want and did not like and did not order, were we allowed to eat in peace?

We were not.

The waiters hovered over us like vultures over a field of battle.

Of course, not one of us will ever go into that particular restaurant again.

I wonder if we ought not to write to the manager of the place and tell him that people want a little privacy and a little quiet and a little kindly letting alone when they order a quiet dinner and expect a quiet hour of friendly visiting after a hard day.

New York Day by Day—O. O. McIntyre

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, April 10—Thoughts while strolling: Won't someone tell Lou Tellegen he is no longer The Great Love? Maybe after all he was only a Passing Fancy. They say Morton Downey plays only black keys and by ear. What became of Fred Merkle? Nobody slings adjectives like A. P. Herbert of London Punch.

Albert Keller, a Frankfort, German, boy, who made good in the city. Some day I'd like to see a Chinese restaurant on the ground floor. William Kent is graying, too. Catch me buying any more bonds. What else can the Astaires do besides that lopping dance?

"Grand Hotel" as a play is far better than the book. The way they come reeling out of those German beer places! Who remembers the peek-a-boo waist? I always want to write it Zona Grey. And Zane Gale. That moist sweetness of spring showers. Isabel Paterson, the book critic.

A new luncheon place in the 40's is getting the Dinty Moore-Sardi "celebrity" crowd. Fifth ave. is going to seed. But wait for the new Radio City! The Capitol ushers may not dress so grandly, but they are the politest. See her! What's become of Tommy Lyman?

The smallest of the Metropolitan stars—Lily Pons. Those frail, elderly ladies, with white lace collars and cuffs, who drive in the park daily. Suggesting the calmness of blue ice. Jules Glenzer's alert fair for life. Harold Ross' side hair part.

Never see a russet apple. Cabaret sign: "Hot sole slappers and lazy hip rollers." No one beats Lee Patrick portraying a tough stage lady. Those mournful cornet street soloists. And the drab of a mackerel sky. Why doesn't a Welsh rarebit taste as good as it smells?

Clarence Budington Kelland, in toastmastering a recent dinner, led off with: "The function of a toastmaster is to be as dull as possible in order to make the speakers whom he is to introduce appear brilliant. As I look up and down the table at this array of speakers, it occurs to me this evening I shall have to rise to new heights of dullness."

* * *

Rennold Wolf once said the best after-dinner speeches are composed in taxicabs going home by people who had never been called upon to speak.

* * *

Harry, the butler, has burst out in a columnar effort. On a desk scratch pad today he had written: "An old colored man upon being asked how he felt replied: "Well, boss, I feel kinda bewixt 'Oh, Lord and "Thank God.'"

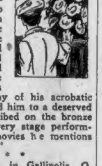
Mr. Keefe is a newspaper man and press agent who came within an eyelash of authoring what the Rialto would call "smash hits." He has a raw sense of realism that wobbles somewhat in his first efforts, but producers are confident they will gal-vanize eventually into something that will knock the town cold.



Evansville, Ind., has not forgotten a local boy who made good in the city—Joe Cook. A bronze has been placed at Fourth and Oak. His old home, in the yard of which he learned many of his acrobatic didoes that lifted him to a deserved celebrity. Inscribed on the bronze is this: "At every stage performance and in movies he mentions Evansville, Ind."

* * *

On Court st. in Gallipolis, O. there is also a bronze dingus indicating where this performer used to live. "People from everywhere stop and look at it," wrote Harry Maddy. "Some weeks there are two or three."

Listen, World!—Children

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Should We Give Them Life?

IF YOU HAD IT TO DO OVER AGAIN, WOULD YOU HAVE YOUR CHILD?

OR WOULD YOU DECIDE THAT LIFE WAS A TRAGIC GIFT FOR A CHILD, AND MOTHERHOOD A BAD BARGAIN FOR YOU?

You look at your adored darling and then you glare at me in horror. What sort of unnatural monster am I to even suggest that motherhood's a bad bargain? And how can life—life filled with its sweet love and thrilling adventure—be a tragic gift for anyone?

I'm not an unnatural monster. I'm simply printing two questions which thousands of desperate mothers and fathers are asking today. If you've never heard those questions, it's time you did. They are part of the world in which you live — THAT WORLD FOR WHICH YOU ARE RESPONSIBLE.

Elsie Robinson

Here, today, is a letter. A real letter. Written by a real mother. Reading it, in your happy home, with the laughter of your own babies sounding in your ears and the smell of your good dinner drifting in through the kitchen door, this letter will appall you. But it will sound tragically familiar to other readers. For there's many and many an American home today where children are not laughing—where there's no smell of dinner drifting through the door.

"Elsie Robinson:

"You won't print this letter. It doesn't fit in with your pretty theories about life. But I have to write it because I have been reading one of your typical outbursts about the 'glory of motherhood' and the 'precious gift of life.' Let me tell you—life isn't always a precious gift and there is plenty of motherhood that isn't glorious.

"Look at my life. I had your theories once—when I was first married and terribly in love. Even though we had hardly a cent when our baby was born, my husband and I both had those theories. Then he fell sick. I had to go to work. For, three years I supported and nursed him—then he died and I was alone with the baby.

"Maybe you wouldn't talk so fine if you had ever been left alone with a baby, not a penny and no decent training. The boy and I have had four years of it and it has been four years of hell.

"He's seven. You know how a seven-year-old boy ought to look. As carefree and silly and dear as a little puppy. My boy doesn't look like that. He has the face of an old man and there is fear—real fear—in his eyes. He talks like an old man, too. He has said to me often that life isn't worth while. Think of a seven-year-old boy saying that. But it is true. Life isn't worth while, for either of us.

"I made a big sentimental gesture when I indulged in motherhood—for that was what it was—SELFISH INDULGENCE. My husband and I wouldn't have dared go into any other business on earth with the capital we had then—yet we became parents without a thought and believed we were doing something wonderful. WHAT HAS IT MEANT TO OUR BOY? Seven years of misery so far. God only knows what lies ahead.

"I am not giving my address. I don't want your charity. But I would just like to make you face facts, once in a while."

"SADIE R——."

I faced them, Sadie—long ago. With a seven-year-old boy by my side. And the same hunger under my ribs, and the same hate in my heart, that's why I'm printing your letter. That's why I'm answering for you when some people say—as some people will say.

"I don't think much of a young mother who feels like that!"

You don't?

WELL WHAT DO YOU THINK OF A GREAT, RICH NATION OF PEOPLE WHO LET A YOUNG MOTHER AND A STARVING BOY FEEL LIKE THAT?

Bribery Is No "Act of God"!

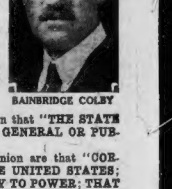
By Bainbridge Colby

I AM indebted to its publishers for a copy of the current issue of "Public Utilities Fortnightly"—a magazine which proclaims that it "treats specifically of the problems incidental to the regulation of public utility companies as viewed from the economic, financial, legal and political standpoints."

It is announced that within "this special field" the magazine "covers the entire range of public utilities—electric light and power companies, street railways, interurban railways, motor vehicle utilities, gas companies, water utilities, telephone and telegraph companies, steam railroads, water transport utilities, express and freight companies, heat utilities, radio utilities and air transport utilities."

My attention was at once attracted to what the publishers describe as "The LEADING ARTICLE in this number," which occupies, to use their phrase, "the place of honor in this magazine."

The title of the article is "LET BIG BUSINESS REGULATE ITSELF," not a surprising plea in view of the comprehensive range of public utilities which the magazine has adopted for "its special field."



BAINBRIDGE COLBY

I find the position confidently taken that "THE STATE CANNOT REGULATE BUSINESS IN GENERAL OR PUBLIC UTILITIES IN PARTICULAR."

The reasons assigned for this opinion are that "CORRUPTION HAS SUCCEEDED IN THE UNITED STATES; THAT BUSINESS HAS WON ITS WAY TO POWER; THAT POLITICS IS BEATEN AND REFORM IS LICKED."

The author of the article is Mr. Lincoln Steffens, who, a quarter of a century ago, won distinction by a sensational series of exposures appearing in the magazines, entitled, "The Shame of the Cities," which were the GENESIS of SEARCHING and FRUITFUL REFORM movements in American municipal government.

But this redoubtable foe of corruption, whether it was found in business or in politics, has apparently grown weary with the passing years and now avows himself defeated as a reformer.

"We are passing out of the period of opinion," says Mr. Steffens, "when decisions and actions were based upon considerations of right and wrong. The consequence has been always the same—POLITICAL CORRUPTION, WHICH RESULTS IN THE REGULATION OF THE REGULATORS. Business has 'had to' run politics and govern the State. IT WAS BUSINESS MEN WHO SAID THAT THEY 'HAD TO' USE BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION."

He continues:

"BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION CANNOT BE DEALT WITH AS FORMS OF FELONY, but must be regarded as items of a process, of a natural, inevitable forces, which was necessary to make a government formed by an agricultural people represent an industrial era. IN A SENSE, THEN, BRIBERY WAS AN ACT OF GOD."

Mr. Steffens, who views corruption as everywhere present in our life, and steadily increasing, nevertheless feels that its triumph is not quite complete.

"The process of corrupting the American democracy into an industrial dictatorship," he says, "is not quite finished." But he adds: "It is near enough to the end to enable a willing observer to foresee that business or industry will either GOVERN THE GOVERNMENT, OR GOVERN ITSELF, OR BOTH.

"Business is going to have," he says, "directly or indirectly, what business men long have wanted: self-government, THE GOVERNMENT OF BUSINESS BY BUSINESS, FOR BUSINESS."

And the article concludes with the question: ARE THE BUSINESS MEN READY FOR IT?

Possibly they are more than ready. They might be said to be even willing and eager for it, judging by the way they hover about the seats of legislation, seeking to guide, deflect or stay, in their own interest, the processes of law-making and regulation.

But there is a preliminary question to be answered before reply need be given to the question asked by Mr. Steffens.

IS AMERICA READY FOR IT?

Heaven forbid! And so long as America is America, IT WILL NOT BE READY FOR IT.

We have erred, and strayed from the PATHWAYS OF THE COUNTRY'S FOUNDERS. We have been REMISS in the performance of our duties as citizens—in vigilance, in the careful and studious judgment of men and measures, in the stern and prompt casting away of traitorous and corrupt officials.

But, let those who contemplate the shortcomings of democracy with unconcealed complacency remember that we have been to war—with a resultant dislocation on a vast scale of our national life and social habitudes. We have assumed great burdens and are struggling to carry them. We have grown confused at times.

We have listened to the siren voice of material success, and have shirked the rugged road of duty and responsibility.

THERE IS MUCH TO BE DONE, WE ALL KNOW, TO PUT OUR HOUSE IN ORDER.

BUT AMERICA IS NOT READY, although big business may feel itself approaching the point, to admit even "in a sense" that bribery is an act of God, or that corruption has succeeded in the United States.

WHERE THE WETS made their great mistake was in not telling the drys back in the good old days that prohibition was a non-political question and they mustn't talk about it.

ONE DAY in France we ran into a soldier buried in a fox-hole, far out toward the German lines at Montdidier, and as he couldn't speak English we thought at first we had blundered into the arms of the enemy, but by dint of using the common tongue, broken French, we learned that he was a Bohemian immigrant boy from Chicago. A city that makes soldiers of 'em honors herself in making mayors of 'em.
